THE MISSING FRAGMENT

OF THE

FOURTH BOOK OF EZRA

R. L. BENSLY

B-5

LIBRARY OF PRINCETON NOV 1910
THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

BS 1714 .L3 B4 1875
Bensly, Robert Lubbock, 1831
-1893.
The missing fragment of the Latin translation of the

AMIENS

PHOTOGRAPHIE ÉMILE PARIS

Bibl. Angl. Jour. M.E. Stevens. 1875.

LIBRARY OF NOV 15 191
THEOLOGICAL SEM

THE MISSING FRAGMENT

OF THE

LATIN TRANSLATION

OF

THE FOURTH BOOK OF EZRA,

DISCOVERED,

AND EDITED WITH AN INTRODUCTION AND NOTES,

BY

ROBERT L. BENSLY, M.A.

SUB-LIBRARIAN OF THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY, AND READER IN HEBREW, GONVILLE AND CAIUS COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

EDITED FOR THE SYNDICS OF THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

Cambridge:
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

London: CAMBRIDGE WAREHOUSE, 17, Paternoster Row.
Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL, AND CO.

1875.

[All rights reserved.]

Cambridge:

PRINTED BY C. J. CLAY, M.A.

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

TO MY FELLOW-WORKERS

IN THE

REVISION OF THE AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION

OF THE

HOLY BIBLE AND APOCRYPHA,

THESE PAGES ARE RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED.

By the same Editor.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MACCABEES. The Greek text with the Syriac and Latin translations; to which are added other treatises on the Maccabæan Martyrs. [In the Press.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF EZRA. A revised text of the Latin translation, and a full collation of the two oldest MSS. [Preparing.

INTRODUCTION.

In the fourth book of Ezra (the second of Esdras in our Apocrypha) the transition from the thirty-fifth to the thirty-sixth verse of the seventh chapter must strike even a superficial reader as singularly abrupt[1]. That this want of coherence was felt by the earliest of modern commentators on the book, is proved by his elaborate attempt to supply a train of thought in order to bring the two verses into connexion[2]. It was not however till the beginning of the eighteenth century that appeal was made to another representative of the lost original. Then appeared Ockley's translation of the Arabic version[3], where between the verses in question a long passage intervenes,

[1] vii. 33. "Et revelabitur Altissimus super sedem judicii, et pertransibunt miseriae, et longanimitas congregabitur.

34. Judicium autem solum remanebit, veritas stabit, et fides convalescet,

35. Et opus subsequetur, et merces ostendetur, et justitiae vigilabunt, et injustitiae non dominabuntur.

36. Et dixi: Primus Abraham propter Sodomitas oravit, et Moyses pro patribus qui in deserto peccaverunt, 37. Et qui post eum pro Israel"...Vulg. ed. Sabat.

[2] "Audiens Esdras judicium futurum, primum, et novissimum, de populo suo, maxime autem de abjectione synagogae Iudaicae, pro qua plurimum zelabat, quia in ejus locum surroganda esset sponsa ecclesia sine ruga, solicite inquirit ab angelo, si non sit relictus aliquis locus intercedendi pro eo populo, et clementiam impetrandi a pientissimo patre coelesti, cujus sunt infinitae miserationes. Si quo modo gratia implorari possit pro Israele, juxta carnem, ne omnino abjiciatur." Conr. Pellicanus, Com. Bibl. Tom. v. fol. Tiguri, 1538, p. 258.

[3] Published in the Appendix to Vol. iv. of Whiston's Primitive Christianity Reviv'd. 8vo. London, 1711. The existence of this Arabic version had been pointed out by John Gregory, who in his zeal for Oriental learning overestimated its value: "I have cause to believe, that it is the most authenticke remaine of this Booke." Notes and Observations upon some Passages of Scripture. 4to. Oxford, 1646, p. 77. The Arabic text itself, however, was not printed till 1863, by Ewald, in Vol. xi. of the Abhandlungen der k. Gesellsch. der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen. Ockley's English translation has been rendered into Latin by Hilgenfeld, with H. Steiner's corrections, in the Messias Judæorum. Lips. 1869. Hitherto only one MS. of this version has been used, viz. Bodl. 251, which has lost two leaves (containing iv. 24—45 and viii. 50—ix. 1). Ewald (Das 4te Ezrabuch, p. 100) hints at the existence of another MS. in the Vatican, and from Assemani's description, abridged by Mai (Script. Vet. Nova Coll. Vol. iv.), we may readily identify it with Cod. III. Assemani indeed denies the identity of 1 Ezra in this MS. with our 4 Ezra, but the order in which it which carries on the thread of the narrative in an artless and appropriate manner[1]. In the present century the text of the Arabic has been printed, the long neglected Armenian translated[2], and the apparatus criticus of the book greatly increased by the publication of the text and translation of the following versions: the Aethiopic[3], the shorter Arabic[4] (Arab.^{2}), and, last but not least, the Syriac[5], and in all of them the hiatus stands, the title and the beginning which he quotes, are all the same as in the Bodl. MS., so that we may regard his language as a hasty conclusion based on the absence of chapters i. ii. xv. xvi. from the Arabic version.

[1] Yet the genuineness of this portion was not immediately recognized. Dr. Fr. Lee wrote thus to Ockley: "The Arabic Copy, or Version, besides many lesser Interpolations, hath a very large one concerning the intermediate State of Souls" (An Epistolary Discourse concerning the Books of Ezra. Lond. 1722, p. 21). P. J. S. Vogel held all between vii. 25 and assumeretur viii. 20, to be a later addition to the original (Commentatio de Conjecturae usu in Crisi Nori Test., cui adjecta est altera de Quarto Libro Esdrae. 4to. Altorfii, 1795), but the force of his arguments was considerably weakened by a few remarks of Laurence. Hilgenfeld still maintains the theory of an interpolation, but within narrower limits, viz. vii. 45—Vicerit vii. 115 (45).

[2] By J. H. Petermann, for Hilgenfeld's Messias Jud. The Armenian version itself was published as early as A.D. 1666, in the first edition of the Arm. Bible, according to Masch in Le Long's Bibl. S. II. 1, A.D. 1781, p. 175. Its existence therefore could scarcely have been unknown to scholars, as it is mentioned also by Bredenkamp (Eichhorn's Allg. Bibl. IV. A.D. 1792, p. 626), by Michel Tchamitchian (Histoire d'Arménie. 4to. Ven. 1784—86, Vol. III. p. 660; his statement, referred to by Scholz, that Usgan, the editor of the first Arm. Bible, translated 4 Ezra from the Lat. is obviously incorrect), by C. F. Neumann (Versuch einer Gesch. der Armen. Lit. A.D. 1836, p. 39), and by Scholz (Einleitung I. A.D. 1845, p. 501). But strange to say, this version appears to have escaped the notice of the editors of our book till pointed out by Ceriani, A.D. 1861 (see Mon. Sacra et Prof. V. fasc. 1, pp. 41—44).

[3] This version, which had been quoted occasionally by Ludolf, in his Lex. (see Van der Vlis, Disp. Crit. de Ezrae Libr. Apocr. vulgo quarto dicto, p. 75), was published together with a Lat. and Engl. transl. by Laurence (Primi Ezrae Libri, qui apud Vulg. appellatur quartus, Vers. Aeth. Oxon. 1820), from a MS., which is now in the Bodl. Libr. (No. VII. Dillm. Cat.). Many conjectural emendations were proposed by Van der Vlis in the treatise just mentioned; and Dillmann has given from MSS. examined by him an important list of various readings, but without specifying his authorities (Das vierte Ezrabuch.....von Ewald, pp. 92—100); finally Fr. Practorius has, by the aid of Dillmann's variants and four additional MSS., revised the Lat. transl. of Laurence for Hilgenfeld's Messias Jud. The materials for a critical edition of the text, which is still a desideratum, have been increased lately by the addition to the Brit. Mus. of the Magdala collection of Aeth. MSS., which contains no less than eight copies of this book (see Prof. Wright's list in the Zeitschr. der deutschen morgenl. Gesellsch. XXIV. 1870, p. 590).

[4] Also published by Ewald in 1863 (Abh. der k. Gesellsch. der Wissensch. zu Gött. Vol. XI.), from MS. Hunt. 260 (Bibl. Bodl. Codd. MSS. Orient. Cat. II. ed. Nicoll, p. 11), and described by him in Nachrichten von der Georg.-Aug. Univ. u. der k. Gesellsch. der Wissensch. zu Göttingen, 1863; it has been translated into German by Steiner, in Hilgenf. Zeitschrift, Vol. XI. 1868. As Dr. Guidi has supplemented for me the imperfect notice printed by Mai on Cod. Ar. Vat. CCCCLXII. (Script. V. N. coll. IV.), I am able to announce the discovery of a second MS. of this version.

[5] A Latin translation of this version was printed by Dr. Ant. Ceriani in 1866 (Monum. Sacra et Prof. Vol. I. fasc. 2), and followed after a short interval by the publication of the Syriac text itself (id. Vol. V. fasc. 1, 1868) from the celebrated MS. of the Peshito (B. 21. Inf.) in the Ambrosian Library. The same scholar now proposes to reproduce by photolithois found to be filled up in essentially the same way. As these versions seem generally to be of independent origin, and some are of considerable antiquity, their agreement graphy the entire MS., which has been assigned to the sixth century.

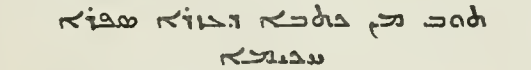
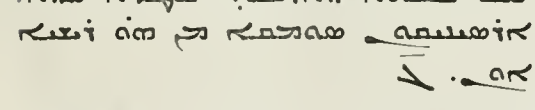
There had long before been rumours of the existence of a Syriac version in a MS. once the property of Julius Caesar Scaliger, which Fabricius in vain attempted to discover (Cod. Pseudepigr. Vet. Test. ed. II. Vol. II. p. 176). The MS. in question is thus referred to by Scaliger himself: "Arcana vero multo plura continentur in libris Esdrae, atque potiora, quam quivis enarratione. Eos libros, quod hoc eloqui ausus es, suspicor te non vidisse: quorum admirabile, ac divinum compendium apud me est, Syra conscriptum lingua. In iis igitur longe, uti dicebam, praestantiores sententiae continentur, quam in concionibus sordidissimi calumniatoris, atque impurissimi impostoris Emanuelis." Exotericarum Exercitationum Liber quintus decimus, de subtilitate ad Hieron. Cardanum. 4to. Lutetiae, 1557, f. 422. Exerc. ccccviii. 'an lectis audita jucundiora.' This can scarcely be an allusion to the 3rd and 4th books of Ezra, but rather, as Fabricius suggests, to what was supposed to be a Syriac compendium of the seventy secret books mentioned in 4 Ezra xiv. 46, 47. I believe that the very MS., which Scaliger could so safely flourish in the face of his opponent, is now in the University Library, Cambridge, marked MM. 6. 29. It treats of astrology and alchemy, and resembles, to some extent, MS. Egerton, 709, in the Brit. Mus. (described in the Catal. of Syr. MSS. by Prof. Wright, Vol. III. p. 1190).

From fol. 116 b. to fol. 120 a. of the Cambridge MS., we have what professes to be an extract from the Book of Ezra, the wise scribe,



It commences thus:



This MS. once belonged to Erpenius, and came into possession of the University together with his other MSS. in 1632. In the earliest printed catalogue of this collection it seems to be described as Liber theologicus mutilus, in 4. (Petri Scriverii Manes Erpeniani. 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1625). Erpenius probably received it from the younger Scaliger, and it is not unlikely that it was one of the libri Chaldaici in the possession of Jo. Picus Mirandula; that scholar, as we know, regarded the seventy books, above referred to, as a storehouse of mystic theosophy and cabbalistic lore, and I know of no other Syr. MS. that could in any degree justify, from his point of view, such glowing language as this: "Animarunt autem me, atque adeo agentem alia, vi compulerunt ad Arabum literas Chaldaeorumque perdiscendas, libri quidam utrinsque linguae, qui profecto non temere, aut fortuito, sed Dei consilio, et meis studiis bene faventis Numinis, ad meas manus pervenerunt. Audi inscriptiones, vadimonium deseres: Chaldaici hi libri sunt, si libri sunt, et non thesauri. In patris Ezre, Zoroastris, et Melchiar Magorum oracula, in quibus et illa quoque, quae apud Graecos mendosa et mutila circumferuntur, leguntur integra, et absoluta: tum est in illa Chaldaeorum sapientum, brevis quidem et salebrosa, sed plena mysteriis interpretatio. Est itidem et libellus de dogmatis Chaldaicae theologiae, tum Persarum, Graecorum, et Chaldaeorum in illa divina et locupletissima enarratione. Vide, Marsili, quae insperata mihi bona irrepserunt in sinum"... (Opera Omnia, fol. Bas. 1601, Vol. I. p. 249).

The report with regard to a Hebrew copy of this book rests only on a vague statement of an untrustworthy writer: Tertium et quartum Ezrae Hebraicos adhuc ipse non vidi: quidam tamen ex ipsis aiunt, eos nuper inventos Constantinopoli reperiri. Galatinus, Opus de Arcanis Cathol. veritatis. 1561, p. 2. Dr. Fr. Lee was entirely mistaken in supposing that the Hebrew words printed on the margin of this book in the Lat. Bible of H. Stephens 8vo. Lutet. [1545] were derived from a Hebrew copy, and even Laurence failed to remove all misapprehension on this point (Primi Ezrae libr. vers. Aeth. p. 301). The fact is that Petrus Cholinus (not Leo on this point raises a strong presumption that the additional matter formed part of the Greek text from which they were derived. Not only so, but there is decisive evidence that the Latin version also once contained the passage which is now absent; for Ambrose, in his treatise De Bono Mortis, drew largely for illustration from this version, and especially from the missing portion. The Benedictine editors of his works were perplexed at references which they could not verify, and suggested that a solution might be found in the examination of fresh MSS.[1] They casually refer to two, one of which belonged to their own library (at St. Germain des Prés); this was in all probability the 'MS. Sangermanensis' (Cod. S.), which a distinguished member of this order (Pet. Sabatier) upwards of sixty years later made use of for his great work, especially in the fourth book of Ezra. In late years it has been collated in a few passages by Dr. Hase for Volckmar's Esdra Propheta, and very fully by Dr. Zotenberg for Hilgen-

Judaeus), who modernized the Latin version of this book, occasionally added on the margin, not only in this, but in the other apocryphal books, a Hebrew equivalent where it seemed to throw a light on the peculiar use of a Latin word or phrase. E.g. chap. iv. 52, De signis de quibus me interrogas, stands thus in the revised text: Praesagitiones eorum de quibus me interrogas, with the marginal note מפתים indicia, vaticinia seu praedictiones. v. 42, novissimorum tarditas; in the revised text: posteriorum tarditas, with the marg. note אחרונים; similarly in other places. vii. 33, et longanimitas congregabitur; in the revised text: et finis imponetur patientiae, marg. יאסף. In the same way a Greek word is sometimes introduced, and yet no one has ventured to maintain that the Greek was still extant. As in chap. x. 14, ab initio ei qui fecit eam [=terram]; in the revised text: homini qui eam jam inde ab initio exercuit, marg. ἐργάζεσθαι, facere et colere, ut et עבד. xiv. 9, converteris; in the revised text: conversaberis, marg. ἀναστρέψῃ.

[1] "Quin etiam eumdem hunc librum inter canonicos descriptum in quibusdam antiqui aevi MSS. reperire est, non tamen in omnibus, nec sine discrimine aliquo. Namque in quodam pervetusto codice qui nostra in Bibliotheca adservatur, compactis in unum duobus canonicis libris Esdrae, secundus a primo capite hujusce quarti sumit exordium, haud dubie quia ejus illud initium est: Liber Esdrae Prophetae secundus: tum ex ejus atque tertii libri capitibus inter se permixtis quatuor libelli conficiuntur. Doctissimus Faber Ludovici XIII. praeceptor quemdam ejusdem quarti libri MS. adeo discrepare ab editione deprehendit, ut varias ejus lectiones Card. Baronio transmittendas putaret. Quae diversitas forte in causa est, cur nonnulla ab Ambrosio ex eodem libro citata in edito minime reperiantur." S. Ambrosii Opp. fol. Par. 1686, Vol. i. 388.

The following is the passage referred to from the letter of Nic. Faber to Card. Baronius:

"Porro his litteris adiunxi exemplar donationis Othonis tertij discipuli Gerberti qui Siluester 2. dictus est, ex eodem illo volumine instrumentorum cuius supra mentionem feci transcriptum: tum etiam duorum capitum priorum libri quarti Esdrae ex manuscripto Bibliorum codice non admodum vetusto ab editis valde dissidentium, vtrumque, ni fallor, valde sublestae fidei...

..... Duo autem illa capita, quod eam varietatem libri licet apocryphi antiquissimi tamen, cuiusque magni viri Clemens Alexandrinus & B. Ambrosius auctoritatem non defugerunt, doctissimis illis viris qui elegantissimis vtriusque linguae Bibliorum editionibus praefuerunt non ingratam foro existimauerim, & in eo vtilem quod ex isto fragmento quaedam in editis emendanda percepturi sint." Nic. Fabri Opuscula, Par. 1618, p. 107.

feld's Messias Judæorum, and it is now regarded by the common consent of scholars as the oldest and best authority for the Latin text of our book. It is in the second volume of the Latin Bible now numbered MS. 11504, 11505, fonds Latin, Bibl. Nat., Paris[1]. Sabatier described it as nine hundred years old at the time when he wrote (1751), and editors invariably speak of it in general terms as a MS. of the ninth century, but the precise date at which it was written is recorded in the MS. itself, viz. the eighth year of Louis le Débonnaire (= A.D. 822). Great as is the critical value of this MS., a still higher interest attaches to it in the history of the transmission of our book of Ezra, for the researches of Prof. Gildemeister lead to the conclusion that it once contained the lost verses, and that it is the parent of all later MSS. The following extract, translated from a letter which he has kindly sent me on the subject, will explain the process by which he has arrived at this important result:

"On collating the Codex Sangermanensis in 1865, I discovered that the missing passage between chap. vii. 35 and 36 was once contained therein. The verso of one leaf ends with: et iniustitiae non dormibunt, and the recto of the next begins with: primus (with a small p) Abraham propter Sodomitas et Moyses. But a leaf which originally came between (it was the sixth of the quire, if I am not mistaken) has been cut out, leaving about half an inch of its inner margin, so that the corresponding leaf remains fast in the binding. The inevitable inference then is that all known MSS., since none have been found without this lacuna, were derived from the Codex Sangermanensis. And this I have found fully confirmed by arguments drawn from the state of the text in the MSS. themselves; for I have myself collated a considerable number in the course of many years, and have been able to trace the gradual and at the same time arbitrary changes continually going on till the appearance of the first printed edition."

These remarks set vividly before us the high importance which would attach to the discovery of a MS. of this book, at least as old as the Cod. Sangerm. The existence of such a MS. in one of the libraries of Europe could scarcely be looked on as beyond the bounds of possibility, especially when we consider how large a field remained unexplored owing to the imperfect notices of the contents of a Lat. Bible given even in some of the better Catalogues of MSS. I have therefore for several years availed myself of every opportunity of examining Latin biblical MSS. The book itself is not, according to my experience, so uncommon as is generally supposed[1]; I found it in many Codices ranging from the thirteenth to the fifteenth centuries, but never without the lacuna. Meanwhile an article in the Catalogue of MSS. belonging to the Bibliothèque Communale of Amiens, by Mons. J. Garnier, 8vo. Amiens, 1843, had caught my eye—it runs thus:

[1] See the reff. in Nouveau Traité de Diplomatique, Vol. VI. p. 638, and especially the Comte de Bastard's costly work, Peintures des MSS. depuis le huitième siècle jusqu'à la fin du seizième, dix-septième Livraison (1842), which contains a facsimile of 4 Ezra xvi. 78.

"10. Libri Esdrae. Vélin in-4°. 83 f.

d. r. L.[2] Corbie. 174. A.

IX^e. siècle. Ecriture minuscule rapide, peu soignée et de plusieurs mains, à 2 colonnes de 30 lignes, non réglées. Le premier feuillet est à demi détruit.

Esdras est ici divisé en 5 livres. Le 1^er. est composé des deux livres d'Esdras, appelés Canoniques; les quatre autres comprennent le 3^e. et le 4^e. de la Vulgate.

Le 2^e. du MS. est le 3^e. de la Vulgate; le 3^e. comprend les deux premiers chapitres; le 4^e. les chapitres 3 à 15; le 5^e. les chapitres 15 à 16 du 4^e. livre.

On lit à la fin: Finit liber quintus Esdre profuete deo gratias ago pro hoc facto perfecto. On y lisait autrefois: Finiunt quinque libri, mais ces trois mots ont été effacés pour y substituer l'autre formule.

A la suite est la préface de St. Jérôme Utrum difficilius. C'est sans doute cette division d'Esdras qui a fait dire à l'auteur du Catalogue de Corbie, à l'article de ce MS.: Cela paraît curieux à examiner. A moins qu'il n'ait entendu par là, les mots ubhinc non recipitur ajoutés en tête du 2^e livre, et non adhuc non recipitur, comme on voit dans le catalogue publié par Montfaucon, qui désigne ainsi ce MS.: Item

[1] Laurence thus sums up the result of his investigations: "As the fourth book of Esdras was not translated by Jerome, it is of very rare occurrence in the MSS. of the Latin Bible. I have examined in all 187 MSS., 117 of which are in Oxford; viz. 86 in the Bodleian Library, 7 in St John's, 6 in Christ Church, 5 in Brazen Nose, 4 in New College, 4 in Magdalen, 3 in Corpus Christi, and 2 in the Radcliffe Library; the remaining 70 being in the British Museum; but I have found it in only 13; viz. in 3 at the Bodleian, in 2 at New College, in 1 at Magdalen, and in 7 at the British Museum" (Primi Ezrae libri...versio Aeth. p. 283). My researches among the libraries at Cambridge give a higher average. I have examined a little more than 100 MSS. of the Latin Bible, and have found it in 12; viz. in 2 at the University Library, in 2 at St. Peter's, in 2 at St. John's, in 1 at Gonville and Caius, in 1 at St. Catharine's, in 1 at Jesus, in 1 at Emmanuel, in 1 at Sidney Sussex, and in 1 at the Fitzwilliam Museum; besides this, chapters I. II., alone, are found in one MS. of the University Library and in one of Magdalene.

[2] i. e. Demi reliure de M. Le Prince, about whom M. Garnier has the following interesting notice: "M. Le Prince aîné, qui venait de quitter le commerce, offrit de consacrer ses loisirs à la reliure de ces volumes. Dès lors il alla à Paris étudier cet art auquel il était tout-à-fait étranger, et après un apprentissage qui dura près d'une année, il se créa

2 libri primi Esdrae semel et iterum et duo postremi semel tantum. cod. memb. saec. 9. nota quod initio 2 postremorum habetur eadem manu, Adhuc non recipitur."

Amid the revived interest in apocryphal literature, which has sprung up in this generation, and which has been especially concentrated on the criticism of the fourth book of Ezra, it struck me as very strange that so early a MS. should remain uncollated, nay, actually unnoticed, even by the three diligent scholars, Volckmar, Hilgenfeld, and Fritzsche, who have edited the Latin text in the course of the last twelve years. I pointed out to several learned friends the necessity of examining this copy, but, as nothing was done, I at last undertook the task myself. The perusal of a few verses served to shew the great value of this new critical aid; I read on with growing interest till I approached the place of the long-familiar chasm, then as my eye glided on to the words et apparebit locus tormenti, I knew that the oldest and the best translation of this passage was at last recovered, that another fragment of the old Latin was gathered up, and that now at last—an event which can scarcely happen again in these latter days—a new chapter would be added to the Apocrypha of our Bible[1].

It will be seen that this MS. of the books of Ezra once belonged to the Benedictine Abbey of Corbie, in the neighbourhood of Amiens. The history of the library of this abbey has been graphically told by M. L. Delisle[2]. It appears that it had for un atelier, revint à Amiens et, avec un zèle et une générosité sans exemple, donna à plus de 500 volumes et à ses frais, une reliure simple, riche, solide et convenable." (Cat. p. xxxi.)

[1] It would have been well if the compilers of our Articles had avoided the appearance of claiming even the qualified approval of Jerome for the 3rd and 4th of Ezra. "And the other books (as Hierome saith) the Church doth read for example of life and instruction of manners, but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine. Such are these following: the third book of Esdras, the fourth book of Esdras, etc." Art. VI. The language of Jerome here referred to is used by him expressly of Judith, Tob., the books of Macc., Wisd. and Ecclus. (In Libros Salomonis, Chromatio et Heliodoro, ed. Ben. I. 938, 939). He speaks in other terms of these books of Ezra: "Nec quemquam moveat quod unus a nobis editus liber est: nec apocryphorum tertii et quarti somniis delectetur: quia et apud Hebraeos Esdrae Nehemiaeque sermones in unum volumen coarctantur: et quae non habentur apud illos, nec de vigintiquatuor senibus sunt, procul abjicienda" (Ad Domnionem et Rogatianum in Esdr. et Neh. Praef.). Again, of the 4 Ezra: "Et proponis mihi librum apocryphum, qui sub nomine Esdrae a te et similibus tui legitur...quem ego librum nunquam legi. Quid enim necesse est in manus sumere, quod Ecclesia non recipit?" (Adv. Vigilantium, ed. Ben. IV. 283).

[2] Bibliothèque de l'École des Chartes, 1860, on p. 438 he sums up the history thus: "La bibliothèque de Corbie, l'une des plus considérables qui aient existé en France au moyen âge, est uniquement due au zèle des moines, qui, depuis le huitième siècle jusqu'au quinzième, travaillèrent sans relâche à l'enrichir, soit en copiant, soit en achetant des MSS. Les trésors patiemment amassés pendant près de huit cents ans sont dilapidés au seizième et

a long time been exposed to pillage, and when in 1636 Corbie was recaptured from the Spaniards by the troops of Louis XIII. it was thought advisable to transfer the most valuable portion of the literary treasures to the security of the capital of the kingdom. In consequence of a petition of the monks, four hundred select MSS., which had been taken to Paris, were not alienated from the order, but deposited in the Benedictine Abbey of St. Germain des Prés, n'ayant personne qui soit si jaloux de conserver l'héritage de leurs pères que les propres enfants. At the end of the next century these were transferred, somewhat diminished in number, to the Bibliothèque Nationale. The MSS. left at Corbie were removed to Amiens, probably in 1791, but from these again a selection was made, and seventy-five were sent to the Bibliothèque Nationale in 1803. The residuum however left at Amiens is by no means a contemptible collection, for it contains several MSS. of the ninth century, and among them the Lat. Version of the commentary of Theodore of Mopsuestia on the shorter epistles of St. Paul[1], which till lately was thought to be unique, and the volume which has furnished materials for the present work. Thus by a strange fatality the latter MS. has been lost in provincial obscurity, for had it been despatched to Paris with the four hundred in the seventeenth century, it would certainly have been examined by Sabatier; and if sent later, with the seventy-five, it could scarcely have escaped the notice of the scholars of the present century.

au commencement du dix-septième siècle. Beaucoup de MSS. de Corbie passent alors dans différentes collections particulières. Restaurée par les religieux de la congrégation de St. Maur, la bibliothèque de Corbie est menacée d'une suppression complète à la suite de la reprise de la ville de Corbie en 1636 par les troupes de Louis XIII. En 1638, quatre cents MSS., choisis parmi les plus importants, sont envoyés à Saint-Germain des Prés; de là ils arrivèrent à la Bibliothèque nationale en 1795 et 1796, à l'exception d'environ vingt-cinq volumes, qui avaient été volés en 1791, et qui doivent être pour la plupart à St. Pétersbourg. L'abbaye de Corbie conserva jusqu'à la Révolution près de quatre cents MSS. qu'on n'avait pas jugé à propos de porter à Paris en 1638. Cette suite de MSS., dans laquelle soixante-quinze volumes ont été pris en 1803 pour la Bibliothèque nationale, forme le fonds le plus curieux de la bibliothèque d'Amiens."

[1] No. 88, Corbie 51. F. It was published (the Com. on Gal., Eph., and Philem. entire, and various readings only of the rest, resulting from a collation with what Rabanus Maurus had introduced under the name of Ambrose, in his commentary on these Epistles) by J. B. Pitra (Spic. Solesm. I. 1852), but erroneously assigned by him to Hilary of Poitiers (so cited even by Rönsch, Itala u. Vulg. ed. 2, p. 526). The true authorship was first discovered by Prof. J. L. Jacobi (Deutsche Zeitschrift für Christliche Wissenschaft u. Christliches Leben 1854, pp. 245—253), who subsequently edited the Com. on Phil., Col., and 1, 2 Thess. in five University Programmes, Halle, 1855—66 (the 4th and 5th are both entitled 'Pars IV.'). Mr. Hort, who arrived independently at the conclusion that Theodore of Mopsuestia was the author (Journal of Classical and Sacred Philology, Vol. IV. pp. 302—308. Cambridge, 1859), has lately recognized the same work in an anonymous exposition of St. Paul's Epistles among the treasures of the Brit. Museum (MS. Harl. 3063); so that all seems fully ripe for a complete critical edition of this valuable commentary.

I now proceed to give a more detailed description of this Amiens MS. of our book, which I propose to call[1] Cod. A. It consists of 84 leaves of 11×7 inches (32,[2] v. and 84, r. and v. being blank), apportioned into 11 gatherings of 8 leaves each, except the 8th and 11th gathering, which have only 6 leaves apiece. The first ten gatherings have signatures by an early hand, from A to K; these signatures are on the last page, except B, which is on the first[3]. In the pages which immediately follow this Introduction, all that I have attempted, is to reproduce this portion of the MS., line for line as it now appears, so far as it can be exhibited by means of ordinary type. It is necessary to mention this, in order that it may not be mistaken for the original reading, which has been so tampered with by erasures[4], corrections, and additions, that it is often difficult to decipher. Further information on these points is given in the notes which follow (on pp. 51—54), where I have supplied, as far as I could, the letters which have been erased, and pointed out all that has been added by later hands. Being obliged to work at a distance from my MS., I have not been able to represent some characteristics of minor importance, such as the way in which words are spaced[5]. These and other defects may in some measure be remedied by the printed photograph of a page (fol. 65, r. chap. vii. 97—109 (39)), which I have inserted; but it is hoped that the Palæographical Society will undertake to perpetuate by indelible facsimiles the

[1] The letter A can scarcely be regarded as preoccupied, since it has only been used by one editor (Fritzsche) to denote the Bibl. Eccles. Aniciensis Velaunorum, Tom. II., e bibliotheca Colbertina (Cat. Codd. MSS. Biblioth. Reg. Pars III. Tom. III. Paris, 1744, page 1, No. IV.), which contains no more of our book than the 'Confessio Hesdrae' (chap. viii. 20—36) written in smaller characters at the end of Nehemiah.

[2] This blank comes in the middle of a verse; fol. 32, r. b ends with uocate adolescentes and fol. 33, r. a goes on with the next words: et ipsi indicabunt...3 Ezra iii. 16.

[3] As I have lately made use of a brief vacation to collate Cod. S., it may not be thought out of place to subjoin a few additional particulars with regard to that MS. The size of a leaf is $19\frac{1}{2} \times 13$ inches; the gatherings are composed of 8 and occasionally of 10 leaves; the signatures, which in the Vol. examined by me are always on the last leaf, run on continuously from Vol. I. to Vol. II. A slight inspection sufficed to shew the correctness of Prof. Gildemeister's statement with regard to the excision of a leaf, for in the gathering marked XXXVIII., where 4 Ezra is found, there are only 7 leaves, of these 1 and 8 form a sheet, and so also 4 and 5; 2 and 7 are separate leaves pieced together, while 3 has no fellow, for 6 has been cut out with a knife, traces of which have been left on 5; the present pagination takes no account of this defect.

[4] I have inserted an asterisk to indicate an erasure (generally of a single letter), which has not been written over.

[5] The preposition and the word which follows generally cohere; chap. vi. 42 is a good illustration of the confusion which may arise from this habit of writing, here instead of ut ex his sint, Cod. A. has ut exissent, and for a dō, which stands both in Cod. A. and Cod. S., adeo is said to be the reading of Cod. T., and is adopted by Hilgenfeld and Fritzsche.

few precious pages, which have alone preserved this interesting fragment of the old Latin[1].

The character used in our MS. is the Carlovingian minuscule. Capitals are occasionally introduced at the beginning of paragraphs. Two forms of the first letter are used indiscriminately, viz. a and a, the latter sometimes resembles cc written closely together (see photograph, col. 1, l. 5). The diphthong is written ae, æ or ę (the lower loop in the last form is often added in different ink). The letters b, d, h and l are often thicker above and slightly curved. An instance of c joined by an upper stroke to t may be seen in the photograph, col. 2, line 28. A lengthened form of the letter e is frequently projected forward, especially on one of the letters m, n, r, f, u or x; a similar combination may be traced in the common form &, from which ec, as sometimes written, differs but slightly. The letter i coming after l or t is occasionally produced a little below the line, after m or n it is sometimes written entirely below the line (e. g. in fol. 62, v. b, line 26). The letter n sometimes takes the uncial shape, and is found so written, especially at the end of a line, in combination with a stilted T (see photograph, col. 1, l. 10), more frequently however the t in -nt has the appearance of a long sloping line notched above, springing from the last stroke of the ordinary n (see photograph, col. 1, l. 12). The stem of the r is often extended below the line, and sometimes this letter is so linked with a following t, that it might easily be mistaken for f (see photograph, col. 1, l. 28). The letter r generally takes another form when preceded by o, e. g. o2. The letter y is dotted thus: ẏ. I have given an approximation to the form of the stops as they now stand in the MS., but there are frequent traces of a corrector's hand in the signs of interpunctuation[2].

The following is a list of abbreviations which are found in Cod. A.[3]

[1] I notice on a second visit to Amiens, that the numbers of the chapters and also marks, shewing the beginning and end of this particular piece, have been lately added on the margin by the zealous librarian, who has taken a lively interest in my discovery.

[2] A not unusual mark of interpunctuation in Cod. S. consists of a comma with two dots, thus ⁘; as, for instance, et delinquentes multos⁘ Vidit anima mea . . . chap. iii. 29. . . . et abscondita est in infernum⁘ fugit corruptio . . . chap. viii. 53.

[3] In Cod. S. we have cū, dn̄, dn̄s, c̄, ⁊, &, ihs̄, isr̄l, itaq: nr̄i, q', q̄t (for quod), the usual compendia for per, prae and pro, s̄ca, s̄pm̄, s̄, superauer̄, uastabunt², l intersected by a horizontal stroke for uel, ur̄i: besides m̄s (= meus), om̄s with the last stroke of the m dropping below the line (= omnis), om̄s (= omnes), q̄ (= quae), seedm̄, s̄eli, x̄ps; and among the corrections, fr̄ for frater. q̄m is, if I am not mistaken, the uniform contraction for quoniam in Cod. S., and qm, not quum, is the reading of this MS. in vi. 8. The later sign for et (7) occurs in x. 5, but only as an insertion above the line. For quisq see p. 29.

– over a vowel generally = m, as in cū, cōmorantes.
- b; = -bus, as in temporib;.
m̄ = men, as in testam̄tis.
-mꝓ = -mus, as in altissimꝓ.
-r̄ = -runt, as in fecēr.
t' = tur, as in t'batio.
-t² = -tur, as in ostendet².
t̄ = ter, as in t̄minus, diligent̄.
-ū = -uit, as in ꝓlasmaū.
-x̄ = -xit, as in dedux̄.

ꝟr = autem (xiv. 24, 36).
d̄s = deus.
d̄o = deo.
d̄ns = dominus.
d̄nı = domini.
d̄ne = domine.
ei' = eius.
ē = } est.
÷ = }
prod÷ = prodest.
& = et.
dic& = dicet.
nequ&enebras = neque tenebras.
ı̄hs = Iesus.
ısr̄l = Israhel.
mⁱ = mihi.
n̄ = non.
n̄r = noster.
p = per.
p̄ = prae.
p'mꝓ = primus.
ꝓ = pro.
q: = } que.
q; = } neq: = } neque.
neq; = } q' = qui.
q̄d = quod.
q̄m = } quoniam.
q̄nm = } q̄uo = }
s̄cm = sanctum.
scīficationem = sanctificationem.
sp̄m = spiritum.
s̄ = sunt.
t' = tibi.
ū = uel.
ūrı̄ = uestri.

In the marginal and interlinear corrections are found other abbreviations, as: adūsus = aduersus, q· = que, neq· = neque, sı̄c̄ = sicut, and l, with a horizontal stroke through the middle, for uel. The signs of abbreviation are sometimes altered or explained, generally by another hand, thus ostendet' is altered to ostendet[2] vii. 36, finiant' to finiant[2] xiv. 9, porregebat' to porregebat[2] xiv. 39, siccabit' to siccabit[2] xv. 50 (scrutinatur to scrutinat[2] xvi. 63). uel is substituted for ū ix. 34, ē for ÷ vii. 87, terra for t̄ra vii. 62, ^{bi} is added over t[i] vii. 44, ^{n} over ā in quātū vii. 74, and ^{it} over ū in plasmaū vii. 94. Words to be transposed are marked thus ˇ*paradisus* ˇ*ostendetur* vii. 123 (53). Words to be inserted are indicated by ·/·, ·ˇ·, · : · or · · prefixed[1].

It may be here mentioned that there are a few omissions in the text of this MS., occasioned generally by homoeoteleuton, which have not been supplied at a later period, e.g. et amici—inuenietur v. 9, 10; et incontinentia—iustitia v. 10, 11; the greater portion of vii. 104, the three words at the end of viii. 39; et altare—humiliatum est x. 21, 22; et de lingua—flammae xiii. 10; the whole of xi. 27 and of xvi. 43.

Accents are by no means of rare occurrence; the following selection will give a fair idea of the way in which they are used[2]: excídi i. 20, Iohélis i. 39, tuére ii. 20, consúmemus iv. 15, plasmátis v. 26, éa vii. 74, plásmatum vii. 92, adfínis vii. 103, ténebris vii. 125 (55), indignéris viii. 30, confidérunt viii. 30, amarísceris viii. 34, proximastí viii. 47, lugére x. 4, 7, 9, 11, próditi x. 22, páteris x. 50, conparére xi. 19, potióno xiv. 38, allident xv. 60, odítā xv. 60, conbúret xvi. 54.

uis vi. 52, mouéris vii. 15, loquêris vii. 38, fulgére vii. 97, coercêre vii. 116 (46), solíus vii. 118 (48).

The general characteristics of Cod. A. may be gathered from the following classified lists of its principal deviations from the textus receptus on points of orthography and grammar. As it will be convenient to have a comparative view of the distinctive features of the two leading MSS., I have attached an asterisk to every citation where Cod. A. and Cod. S. coincide, and have thrown into the foot-notes further examples of a similar kind from the latter MS. I have always quoted the original reading, and have not thought it necessary for my present purpose to record subsequent corrections.

The interchange of vowels:

a for e: disparsisti v. 28*, insaniantes xv. 30, panna xi. 12.

e for a: castigere v. 30, praeparetum ii. 13, treiecientes xii. 29 (treicientes Cod. S.).

a for i: asaac iii. 15, chaemem vii. 41.

[1] In Cod. S. words to be transposed are thus marked: "terram "omnem xv. 11; words to be inserted have ·/· prefixed.

[2] I subjoin a similar selection from Cod. S. á xvi. 16, 78, áperi v. 37, éa xvi. 8, és vi. 38, viii. 7, 37, etc. hís iv. 43, vi. 54, x. 59, xv. 45, xvi. 19, 21 etc. hós xii. 24, ó iv. 38, vii. 118 (48), viii. 6. tá iv. 34.— Strokes over i: cilicíis xvi. 2, inítium xvi. 18.

conuertêris xiv. 9, exîle xii. 2, pauêrem x. 25, persuadêre x. 20, radîcis iii. 22, splendêrent vi. 2.

i for a: niscebar v. 35.

a for o: natho xv. 39 (natū Cod. S.).

aa for a: Ezraa (voc.) xiv. 2, 38.

ae for e[1]: adpraehendentur v. 1, aegimus xii. 41, Aegyptae xvi. 1*, aepuli ix. 47, aescas ix. 34, Aezra vii. 2, castae vii. 122 (52), conpraehendere iv. 2, depraecatio xii. 7, diae vi. 53, faciae i. 11*, faemur xv. 36, falsae viii. 28, famae xv. 57, 58, gaelus vii. 41, impiae viii. 35, intellegitae vii. 37, interpraetationes xiv. 8, inuanae iv. 16, ipsae xiii. 26, malae vii. 121 (51), praetiosa vii. 57, saecum xi. 30, saecundo vi. 41, saepulchrum v. 35, splendidae viii. 29, speciae xv. 46, uaenae iv. 7, uaer vii. 41, usquaequo vi. 59.

e for ae: Aezre i. 1, coherentes xii. 19 (quoherentes Cod. S.), meroribus x. 12.

e for i[2]: concedit xiii. 11, complecationem[3] vii. 93, demedii xiii. 45, eregere xi. 25, incederent xiii. 23, iteneris xiii. 45, perdedisti iii. 9, reieciet v. 7, sede ix. 26, sterelis v. 1*, uigelaui xii. 3, and in the abl. inimitabile vi. 44.

i for e: acciperunt xiv. 30, discendentem xiii. 12, interfici i. 11*, lugio viii. 16, and in the old plur. termination -is, as accipientis viii. 56, aduenientis iv. 12, dispositionis iv. 23, tristis x. 8*, uenientis vii. 69.

-er for -ur[4]: uiderenter xiii. 11.

i for ii[5]: labis xiii. 10.

ii for i: audii vii. 2, hii, hiis, lociis xvi. 71, nolii ii. 27, tenebriis xiv. 20.

i inserted: immaturios vi. 21.

i for u: corriptibile vii. 96, quadripedia vii. 65.

i for y: abisos iii. 18, Egipto xiv. 29, Assiriorum xiii. 40.

y for i: cybabunt xvi. 69, Sydonis i. 11, sydus xv. 13.

o for u[6]: baiolans iii. 21*, edocauit xvi. 68, latibolis ii. 31, mormurastis i. 15, nas-

[1] This change is not so common in Cod. S., it occurs however in a few other cases, besides those marked thus *: e.g. aeducam ii. 15, aegenti ii. 20, aequi xv. 35 (we have oe for e in poenes ii. 8). On the other hand examples of e for ae are much more numerous in this MS., e.g. Abdie i. 39, acute xvi. 13, aduene xvi. 41, alique xi. 21, aque iv. 49, corone v. 42, deputate vi. 57, diuise, due xi. 24, leticia i. 37, mee ii. 29, passe x. 22, querentem v. 34, spice iv. 32, with many others, especially the plurals of the 1st decl.

[2] In Cod. S. abebo xiv. 19, and some ablatives of the 3rd decl., as de mare xi. 1, xiii. 2, 5.

i for e: exili xii. 30, and in the pl. as cogitationis xvi. 55, praesentis v. 45, vi. 5, similis v. 52.

[3] Comp. Schuchardt, Der Vocalismus des Vulgärlateins, Vol. II. p. 4.

[4] In Cod. S., efficienter viii. 50.

[5] In Cod. S., ite fili ii. 2; the converse, ii for i, does not seem to be so common in this MS.

[6] In Cod. S., lapsos nostros viii. 17, tremor multos xv. 36, sobsessor xv. 33.

u for o: iustus omnes iii. 11, populus acc. pl. iii. 12, coadulescentia iv. 10.

centor xii. 18, tonicas ii. 39*, and in the case-endings of substantives, so that the 2nd decl. becomes substituted for the 4th, excesso x. 37*, flatos v. 37*, gemitos i. 19*, incenso (sic) v. 1, tumulto xii. 2.

u for o: agricula viii. 41, butro ix. 21 (butru Cod. S.), chaus v. 8*, cognuscere ix. 12, curuscabit xvi. 10, intrursus xiv. 33, nun xvi. 10, populus (acc. pl.) i. 11*, pupulum vii. 129 (59), prumptuariis iv. 35*, turmentis xii. 26.

u for au[1]: clusum xiv. 41, clusit xvi. 59.

u inserted: continguent xiii. 32, prolonguauit xiv. 17.

The interchange of consonants:

b[2] for u: praeteribit vii. 46, etc.

u for b: conlaudaueris x. 16*, conseruauis xiv. 46, multiplicauitur v. 2*, uiuificauit v. 45*, etc., odiuilem xv. 48.

c for ch: carta xv. 2 (cartha Cod. S.).

ch for c: Abbachuc i. 40.

c for qu[3]: cotidie iv. 23*.

qu or q for c: consequuti ix. 10, loqutus xiii. 21.

c for t[4]: iniciis vii. 30*, negociantur xvi. 48, in vii. 98 fiducia has been altered to fidutia.

ch for h: chaemem vii. 41, gechennae vii. 36.

h for ch: brahio xv. 11.

ct for t: conplecte xi. 44 (conplecta Cod. A. sec. man. and Cod. S.).

d for t[5]: quando xii. 44; comp. sedes for sitis viii. 59.

t for d: aliut vi. 10*, etc., aput ix. 35, etc., istut i. 18, situs xv. 39.

f for ph: Eufraten xiii. 43, Faraonem i. 10, Ferezeos i. 21*, Finees i. 2*, orfanum ii. 20*, profetiae xv. 1, Sofoniae i. 40.

g for c: gogitationibus xv. 3.

h omitted[6]: imnus x. 22, oras ix. 44.

h prefixed: habierunt x. 22, habundantiam iii. 2*, harena (sic) iv. 17 (harene Cod. S.),

[1] In Cod. S., clusa v. 37.

[2] In Cod. S., b for p: obtabas ii. 41, obproprium iv. 23.
ph for b: Choreph ii. 33.

[3] In Cod. S., anticum vii. 30 (antiqum Cod. A.). qu for c: quoherentes xii. 19.

[4] In Cod. S., iusticiae vii. 35, iniusticia vi. 19, iniusticiae vii. 35, pudiciciam vi. 32, sicientes i. 22.

[5] In Cod. S., capud xi. 31, deliquid viii. 35, quodquod ix. 10.
t for d: quot viii. 62, ix. 29, 34, x. 48.

[6] In Cod. S., umidam vi. 52.
h prefixed: Danihelo xii. 11, helati viii. 20.

Huriel v. 20 (Hurihel Cod. S.), Johélis i. 39*, Israhel iii. 32, etc., Orihel iv. 1 (Horihel Cod. S.).

n omitted: contigebat xi. 19, and in participles, as: dices vii. 38, meties ix. 1*.

n inserted[1]: lingnum i. 23, millensima vii. 138 (68)*, praestans viii. 8*, and so the n of the present is retained in the perfect and its derivatives, as: derelinqui x. 5, xii. 48*, derelinquisti xiii. 54, derelinqueris xii. 44* (comp. delinquæt viii. 35, deliquid Cod. S.), uincerit vii. 115 (45), 128 (58).

p inserted between m and n: condempnare iv. 18*.

t for th: talamo x. 1.

th for t: notho xv. 20.

ll for l: camelli xv. 36, corruptella vi. 28, vii. 113 (43), medella vii. 123* (53), tutellam i. 15.

mm for m: mammellarum viii. 10*[2].

nn for n: Channaneos i. 21.

rr for r: corruscationem vii. 40, errant xiii. 8, conterretur xvi. 11, exterrent xv. 43, 60, exterrant xv. 40, exterruerunt xv. 45*.

ss for s[3]: Assia xv. 46, bellicossum xiii. 9, cassus vii. 118 (48), etc. (but casui iii. 10*), confussi xvi. 66, haessitemini xvi. 76, missit xvi. 62, possuit xvi. 62, possitum xiv. 20, repossita xiii. 18, quessiui xiii. 7, abussi ix. 9, uissionis xii. 10, xiii. 25, in uissionem xiv. 17.

On the other hand:

f for ff: dificile vii. 59.

m for mm: consúmemus iv. 15*.

s for ss: abisos iii. 18, abv̂sos viii. 23, abv̂sum xvi. 58, carisimum vii. 104, confesi ii. 47, fisuris xvi. 29, fortasis iv. 8, misa xvi. 16, dimisa xvi. 13, emisa xvi. 16, inmisus xvi. 3, inmisa xvi. 5, inmisam xvi. 7, intermisione x. 39, promisum vii. 119 (49), presurae ii. 27*, abscisa vii. 114 (44)*, discisa ix. 38*, sesionem ii. 23.

t for tt: commitenda i. 26*, sagita xvi. 16, sagitam xvi. 7, sagitario xvi. 7.

Non-assimilation[4]: adcedebant, adfines, adligabit xvi. 27, *admuntia, *adposui, *adprehendere, *adpropinquauit, *adpropriauerunt, adsimilata, adsumeretur, adtendit.

*conlaudabunt, *conlident, *conmirationem, *conparuit, *conponet, *conpraehendere.

[1] In Cod. S., uidens x. 42.

[2] There are not many examples in Cod. S. of this doubling of the consonant, yet there are two not found in Cod. A., viz. Babillonem iii. 28, sum̄am ii. 11.

[3] Cod. S. has x for s: inextimabilis viii. 21.

[4] In Cod. S. Non-assimilation: adferet, adlident, adquesisti, adtamen, conburent, conprehendere, inmaturos, inreligiose.

*inlata, *inluminatus, *inmensum, *inmisit, *inmortale, *inpigri, *inproperauit, *inproperium, inrita, inritauerunt, obprobrium (obproprium Cod. S.).

subpleam.

Assimilation[1]: *accedat, *aspectus, *aspicias, allident, *apparuit, appropinquat viii. 61*, *collegi etc., *irritum.)

s retained after ex: exspectate, exstiti, exsultatio, exsurget.

s omitted after ex[2]: *exultant.

Substantives: opere[3] for opera xiv. 21*, nubs xv. 34*, uaso vii. 88 (and in vi. 56, Cod. S.), curris for curribus xv. 29*[4], sonus for soni vi. 13*.

A neuter instead of a masc. termination, as: conturbatum est intellectum tuum x. 31*, crescit sensum vii. 64, unde fructum fiat viii. 6*, factum est fructum ix. 32*.

Adjectives and Pronouns[5]: solo (dat.) iii. 14*.

Sibimetipso xiii. 6 (comp. sibimetipsos Cod. S.), tibimetipso iv. 20*, and haec nom. pl. fem. vii. 80 (see note).

Verbs:

Under this head may be noticed: The frequent use of -at etc. for -et etc.[6], and vice versa, as: deficiat xv. 13, ferant vii. 18, adferat xiii. 23, inducat xv. 12, rapiant xvi. 47,—colet xvi. 25, dispergentur ii. 7, faciem i. 30, reuertetur xi. 46, uiuent xiv. 22.

The fut. of the 2nd conj. in -eam, as: doceam iv. 4*, x. 38* (but docebis xii. 38*), respondeam viii. 25* (comp. appareas xi. 45* Vulg.).

The fut. of the 3rd conj. in -ebo, as: confidebunt vii. 98 (see note).

The fut. of the 4th conj. in -ibo, as: dormibunt vii. 35* (comp. custodiuit for -bit xiii. 23* Vulg.).

The form poterint[7] for -runt vii. 102 (see note).

[1] (In Cod. S. Assimilation: accedebant, annunciante xi. 16, irrita, irritauerunt, suppleam.)

[2] In Cod. S., s omitted after ex: expectate, extiti, exultatio.

[3] There are more instances of this plur. in Cod. S., e.g. viii. 33 (where the word is omitted in A., but implied by the forms multae repositae), ix. 7, xiii. 23, xvi. 55.

[4] In Cod. S. we have the gen. parti (for partus) xvi. 39, tumulti xii. 2,—gen. pl. mensum vi. 21.

[5] Illum xvi. 40* is rather a masc. (the subst. saeculum taking its gend. from the Greek, see p. 18) than an archaic form for illud.

[6] In Cod. S., bibant xv. 58, faciat xv. 56. In this MS. -bant is often written for -bunt, as: cogitabant xiii. 31, lugebant xv. 44, manducabant xv. 58, recapitulabant xii. 25; and -bunt for -bant, as habitabunt iii. 12.

[7] Similarly in Cod. S., erint xvi. 66, 70, 72.

The following forms among the compounds of -eo: exiebat xi. 10*, xiii. 4*, exientem xii. 17*, praeterientes v. 55 (praeterientis Cod. S.), prodientem xvi. 39 (prodiente Cod. S.), prodiendum xvi. 40*.

The use of certain verbs as deponents[1], e. g. certati sunt vii. 92 (see note), fluctuatur xvi. 12*, haessitemini xvi. 76 (ɛsitemini (sic) Cod. S.), scrutinatur xvi. 63, trepidentur xv. 29*.

The act. for the depon.[2], as: consules xii. 8 (consulas Cod. S.), consolare (inf.) x. 41*, consulare (inf.) x. 49, demolient xv. 42* (comp. the pass. in x. 21*, xv. 61*), dominabit iii. 28*, dominare (inf.) vi. 57, vii. 5, dominauit xi. 32 (-bit Cod. S.), dominabunt xii. 23*, interpretaui xii. 12*, zelabo xv. 52*, zelabunt ii. 28* (depon. in xvi. 49*, 50*, 51*).

Among compound verbs we find both oboedierunt i. 8, and obaudire i. 24*; both adiecere viii. 55, proiece i. 8, xiv. 14, proiecientur xvi. 24, reieciet v. 7, treiecientes xii. 29, and adiciam ix. 41*, proiciam i. 30*, 33*[3].

Adverbs:

certum xii. 7*, inuanae iv. 16, iteratum v. 13, solum modum vii. 54[4], ualide xiii. 8, in other places ualde.

Construction.

Prepositions joined to a wrong case[5]: a sydus terribile xv. 13 (a sidus terr- Cod. S.), ad dextris vii. 7, coram quem vii. 87 (see note), ut essetis mihi in populo i. 29, eram in Babilonem iii. 1*, super tenebris nigrae vii. 125 (55), qui habitant in eum xv. 14*.

Mistakes in gender[6]: buxos multos xiv. 24*, finem suam xii. 30*, fontes meae ii. 32, labore multa ix. 46, sidus terribilem xv. 40*, somnii quem xiii. 53*, a multo timore quam xii. 5*. There seems to be a tendency to use factum est (ἐγένετο) as a fixed form,

[1] In Cod. S., somniatur x. 36.

[2] In Cod. S., scrutas for scrutaris xii. 4.

[3] In Cod. S., adicere, proice, proicientur, treicientes.

[4] There are other instances in Cod. S., viz. viii. 5, ix. 24 (solum modum flores, but solummodo de floribus in the same verse) and xiii. 9.

[5] The scribe of Cod. S. indulges even more freely in this species of error; he confuses a (ab) and ad, as, a te alia loquar xiii. 56, ab orientalem xv. 39, ad dextera parte xi. 12, ad dextra parte xi. 20, 35, xii. 29, ad leua xi. 35 (comp. 'à droite,' 'à gauche'), ad eminenti xvi. 61, uade ad me v. 19, recessit ad me v. 19, and deals thus with other prepositions: cum laborem x. 47, de mare xi. 1, xii. 11, xiii. 2, 5, de omnem hominem viii. 15, comp. viii. 16, 55, xi. 10, xvi. 73, profectus est ... in ciuitate xii. 50, post aliis tres dies xiii. 56, prae multos x. 57, pro desolationem xii. 48. Cases like ex with the gen. v. 23, 24 (Codd. A., S.), and de with the gen. xi. 29 (Cod. S. and apparently in Cod. A. originally), are in imitation of the Greek.

[6] Add from Cod. S., omnis corpus xii. 3, nubem, quem xv. 39, paradiso, quam plantauit, iii. 6, est factum ... casus vii. 118 (48).

independent of the gender of the subject, as: factum est permanens infirmitas iii. 22 (comp. et factum est species uultus eius altera Luc. ix. 29 Cod. Amiat.); similarly, et cum (om. cum Cod. A.) adhuc esset eis apertum poenitentiae locus ix. 12*.

Sometimes the mistake in gender seems to be due to the influence of the Greek, as in the following examples: creatus est saeculum (ὁ αἰών) vi. 59, qui nondum uigilat saeculum vii. 31*, saeculum qui ab eo factus est ix. 2*, certaminis (ἀγῶνος) quem vii. 127 (57)*, in campum (τὸ πεδίον) quod uocatur ix. 26*, omnem peccatum (ἁμαρτίαν) xvi. 51*, hoc enim erat duorum capitum (κεφαλῶν) maior xi. 29*, multitudinem (τὸ πλῆθος) ...quod paratum erat xiii. 11*.

Among other peculiarities of construction may be noticed[1]: obliuisci with acc. of pers. i. 6* (with gen. i. 14*, xii. 47*); obaudire with acc. i. 24*; the double acc. with certain verbs, as: folia arborum uos texi i. 20* (comp. Ezech. xviii. 7 Hebr., and LXX. Alex., Luc. xxiii. 11, Cod. Bezae, Gk. and Lat.), bibe quod te potiono xiv. 38* (comp. Ps. lxix. 22 Hebr., LXX., Lat., Cod. Sangerm.)[2]; instances of twofold government, as: nolite similari (-ure Cod. A., pr. m.), eam nec operibus eius xvi. 52*; the inf. preceded by ad, as: ad expugnare xiii. 28*, 34, see Rönsch (It. u. Vulg. p. 430), who compares à before the inf. in French; a more general use of et to introduce an apodosis after et factum est, as in et missus est vii. 1*, et feci ix. 47*; the omission of the substantive verb in a relative clause, as: his qui nunc ix. 18*, qui cum eo xi. 31.

Very few of the anomalies exhibited in the foregoing examples have escaped revision. In both MSS. the hands of correctors, some of an early date, have been busy at work, assimilating the abnormal spelling, inflection, and construction to the classical standard of biblical Latin. Thus not only much that was rustic and rugged has been polished, but many an archaic form and phrase has been swept away, which constituted a marked feature of the original translation. Alterations meet us at every step: a letter regarded as superfluous has a short stroke or point (sometimes two points) below it (the points are often placed above in Cod. S.), or is erased. The most common corrections are o with v written above, u by a slight curve converted to o, i by a loop in lighter ink to e, and e to i by a long line drawn through it: u is changed by a continuation of its first stroke to b. The et of the apodosis was a frequent stumbling-block to the revisers, and there are many cases where it has been obscured or obliterated. The numerous corrections, and especially the erasures, form the chief difficulty in the collation of these MSS., and sometimes I have only been able to ascertain the genuine reading by a careful comparison of the faint traces left in the two MSS.

[1] Cod. S. has parcentes with acc. xvi. 72.

[2] For arguo with double acc., see below, p. 33.

I have thus attempted to describe in detail the chief peculiarities of these two MSS., on account of the foremost rank which they will henceforth hold in settling the text of the Latin translation of the 4th book of Ezra. Nothing remains now but to consider the particular arguments in virtue of which Cod. S. is claimed as the ultimate source of all later MSS., and then to determine the relation in which Cod. A. stands to it, and the value to be assigned to this new authority in the criticism of the book. In pursuance of the first of these objects, I now resume my translation of Prof. Gildemeister's important letter at the point where he adduces various examples in proof of his statement that all later MSS. may be traced back to Cod. S. The foot-notes exhibit the readings of MSS. collated by myself.

"In vi. 12, Cod. S. has sequente praecedente, the former word being dotted above as erroneous; in five[1] later MSS. both these words are found. In the same verse, Cod. S. and one MS. besides have ex parte[2], another has parte, which the rest have converted into partem. In iv. 23, data est, the original reading of Cod. S., has been corrected to deducta est; here one MS. gives data est deducta, the first word dotted below. In iv. 24, Cod. S. had originally nostra et pauor, but et is altered, probably by the first hand, to est (thus: ēt), and most MSS. have this reading; but one has et pauor[3], which was corrected in others to ut pauor, and in the printed text to ...nostra stupor et pauor. In iii. 8, Cod. S. has the reading in ira[4], in which it is followed by a number of MSS.; in some this passes into mira, in others into iniqua. The number of these examples might be considerably increased."

"In the very inaccurate text of Cod. S. there are many erasures, as well as corrections, made by various hands not easily to be distinguished; a few of the latter seem to result from the collation of another MS. The MS. nearest allied to Cod. S. is one of the fourteenth or perhaps the thirteenth century, which frequently exhibits the readings of Cod. S. that have become corrupted in later copies. For example, this MS. has not oro[5] vi. 12, nor orauit[6] vii. 36, nor uenerunt vii. 38, the first of which has

[1] Among the later MSS. examined by me, C. 6, L. 7, O. 3, 6, and W. have sequenti precedente, C. 12 has only sequenti.

[2] I have found ex parte in C. 10, 11, H. and L. 5.

[3] Et pauor is also the reading of C. 6, 12, O. 3, and W., and ut pauor of L. 7. Another variant is et uita nostra pauor, found in C. 10, 11, and L. 5.

[4] See below, p. 32.

[5] The word oro is omitted in C. 3, 9, H., L. 3, 4, O. 1.

[6] The absence of a verb in Cod. S. is now explained by the recovery of the lost part of the been added in many, and the second and third in all other copies, in order to complete the sense; it stands alone with Cod. S. in having all the words in the following group[1]: uoluptate iii. 8, delinqui iii. 31, ualidis vii. 42, auis xi. 19 (corrupted in others to aliis, alis, illis). The original of the MS. in question was copied from Cod. S. before some of the corrections had been inserted, and so we find there dedit iii. 5 (comp. the Syr. and Aeth.), as also in Cod. S. pr. m., for dedisti[2] is from a second hand. In iv. 17 this MS. has harene and eam as Cod. S., where however the former has been altered to harena, the latter to eum. Again, in iv. 21 the quae before the last super is absent from this MS., in Cod. S. it has been added later. On the other hand, some corrections had been already introduced, e.g. in iii. 22, Cod. S. had originally malum, and in iii. 26 and iv. 4 cor malum, where in each case the adj. is altered to malignum, and this is the reading found in that MS. Other copies have introduced in iii. 26 the further corruption corde maligno."

"In attempting therefore to restore the earliest form of the Latin, we must always make Cod. S. our starting-point; all other MSS. which have the lacuna after vii. 35 are worthless. It is only an uncritical dilettantism that would construct a text, by balancing the readings of Cod. S. with the arbitrary variations of two or three MSS. which are copied from it. Cod. S. certainly offers no intelligible text, and yet it forms the only basis for conjecture."

From my own examination of Cod. S. and other MSS. I could bring forward many arguments of a like kind in support of the conclusion at which Prof. Gildemeister arrives. For instance, in ii. 40, Cod. S. has respice altered to recipe; the latter I have found in the majority of MSS., but the former is by no means uncommon[3]. In iii. 17, Cod. S. has factus est corrected to factum est; the latter is the usual reading in MSS.; the uncorrected form is retained in Codd. C. 6, O. 3, T. and W. (in C. 12 we find factus es). So facit has been altered to fecit in iii. 31, Cod. S.; the original reading is again represented by Codd. C. 6, 12, O. 3, T. and W., and the correction by the majority of MSS. The untenable construction ut non decurrunt, which Cod. S. presents in vi. 24, naturally gave rise to two readings, et non decurrent, C. 6, 12, L. 7, O. 3, T., W. and Vulg., and ut chapter; the last word on the leaf cut out of this MS. was doubtless rogauit.

[1] I have not found a MS. with the readings of Cod. S. in all these passages, a considerable number however (C. 3, 4, 7, 8, 10, 11, H., L. 1, 2, 3, 6, O. 1, 2, 5, 6) have the word uoluptate; C. 1 has delinqui; C. 1, 3, 9, H., L. 4, 9, O. 1, 6, have pro ualidis, and C. 10 has (not auis, but) auibus.

[2] See below, p. 25.

[3] recipe Codd. C. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, H., L. 1, 5, O. 1, 2, 3, 5, and W.; respice Codd. C. 7, 8, 14, L. 2, 4, 6, 7, O. 6, 7.

non decurrant, which proves to be correct and is found in most MSS.[1] Again, Cod. S. had originally sed non in tempore non omnia...saluantur, viii. 41, but the second non has been struck out; here also the uncorrected text is preserved in Codd. C. 6, 12, D., L. 7, O. 3, T. and W., the corrected text in most other MSS. A few verses lower down (viii. 45), Cod. S. has tu enim creaturae misereris, with ae added above the line after the first word; this is probably the source of the variations which are found in this passage, e. g. tu enim creat. mis. C. 5, 10, 11, O. 5, tue enim creat. mis. C. 1, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, H., L. 9, O. 1. 2, 6, and tu autem creaturae tuae misereris, C. 2, 6, 12, D., L. 7, O. 3, T., W. and Vulg. In x. 20, the word hunc, which was left out by the transcriber of Cod. S., has been supplied on the margin; as there written it stands before sermonem (the first word of the line), but a slight mark is inserted to indicate that it has been omitted after that word; hence we meet with it in both positions, hunc sermonem in Codd. C. 2, 6, 12, D., L. 7, O. 3, T., W. and Vulg., and sermonem hunc in most of the MSS. I will now give an example of another kind, but one no less convincing: in xi. 32, et dominabit qui inhabitant terram in ea is the reading of Cod. S., but the Oriental versions alone (if we had no other evidence) are sufficient to prove that terram has crept in from the preceding clause (comp. the usual formula which occurs in verse 34, xii. 23, 24, and elsewhere); but this word once introduced through Cod. S. has, in spite of all efforts to rectify the construction, remained to this day a disturbing force in all MSS. and printed editions[2]. In xv. 36, the original reading in Cod. S. is femur, but the letter r is written with an upward flourish, so that at first sight it would be readily mistaken for an f[3]; to make the word in some sort intelligible, an i has been drawn through the e, and thus the strange reading fimus has passed into subsequent copies[4].

It seems superfluous to accumulate examples of this kind, yet the argument would be incomplete if I did not call attention to the lacunae as furnishing weighty evidence in determining the pedigree of MSS. Now wherever words have been omitted in Cod. S., [1] In vi. 34, Cod. S. has ut non properas, which has been emended in like manner to ut non properes. The reading, et non properes, retained by modern editors from the Vulg., seems not to be countenanced by the MSS.

[2] C. 10 has et dominabantur qui inhabitant terram in ea, but the effect of the insertion of terram has generally been to drive the words in ea from their position, as in Cod. T.: et dominabitur in ea hiis qui habitant terram, and they are similarly placed after the principal verb in most Codices, as C. 2, 4—8, 11, 12, D., H., L. 7, O. 2, 3, 5, 7, and W., while in C. 3, 9. O. 1, they are expelled as a hindrance to the sense.

[3] A few verses lower down (xv. 45) there is a similar confusion between these two letters in the same MS.; hence the two variations, constantes in the Vulg., constanter in most MSS.

[4] In some early editions it is printed fumus, hence Coverdale's translation: and the smoke of man unto ye Camels lytter.

they seem to have been lost for all subsequent MSS. To quote a few instances, in vii. 112 (42) the subject of orauerunt is wanting in Cod. S. and apparently in all later copies; Volckmar supplies it by the insertion of ualidi, which gives the sense, though, as we shall see, not the language of the original Latin. A comparison with the other versions will disclose important lacunae common to Cod. S. and later MSS. in the following passages: ix. 20, x. 60—xi. 1, xi. 2, and xiii. 22. In xii. 11, quartum has evidently dropped out after regnum, and so this indispensable epithet has ever since been absent from the Latin text. The Oriental versions point to the presence of loquar before coram te in xiv. 18; that word is not in Cod. S., nor have I detected it in any other MS. When an omission creates a void that may be felt, it is but natural that attempts should be made by copyists to fill it up; we have an instance of this in a passage already quoted, vii. 106 (36), where the removal of a leaf from Cod. S. has left the clause without its verb, and orauit has been supplied incorrectly, as we now know, in the MSS. that come after Cod. S. A more ambitious attempt to restore the text may be seen in the same chapter, verse 115 (45), where four words absent from Cod. S. are found inserted in later MSS. In this case, I think that the neque before demergere clearly indicated the loss of a clause, which was supplied ingeniously enough, but, to judge from independent witnesses, incorrectly by the words: salvare eum qui periit. It is in fact this tendency among transcribers to write what is clear and intelligible instead of what is doubtful or difficult to understand, which will explain many curious deviations of later copies from their prototype, Cod. S. To begin with an alteration manifestly incorrect: in ix. 17, Cod. S. has et qualis agricola talis et atria; the easy emendation of the last word (area for atria), proposed by Volckmar, seems not to have occurred to a scribe, and so cultura was boldly substituted, and is now the reading of most MSS.[1] So in xii. 32, the infulcit of Cod. S. reappears as incutiet in the MSS. and printed editions. In xvi. 10, surgebit, the reading of Cod. S., has been changed by later scribes to pauebit (the true word, as we shall afterwards see, is horrebit). It required no great critical acumen to replace filii a potestate, xv. 25, Cod. S., by filii apostatae[2], or misereatur, vii. 133 (63), Cod. S., by miserator; the change in the latter case proves that the key to the structure of the whole passage had been discovered, and prepares us for the further emendation of muneribus, vii. 135 (65), in Cod. S., to munificus in later MSS., which might otherwise have seemed beyond the range of a simple copyist. The reading absolve, in viii. 4, Cod. S. (retained in C. 10), is by a true instinct changed to absorbe in most MSS. Sometimes a single Codex not rising above the dead level of ordinary transcripts surprises us with a happy emendation[1] of an error, which had apparently taken permanent possession of the text. Thus, in C. 5, instead of the long-familiar blunder, et non significasti, nihil memini, quomodo..., iii. 30, 31, we unexpectedly come on a reading which anticipates by six centuries the certain emendation of Van der Vlis, et non significasti nihil nemini, quomodo... Again, we might look long for any improvement on the reading, quando plantasti terram, iii. 4; Hilgenfeld assumes it to be correct in his reproduction of the Gk. ὅτε ἐφύτευσας τὴν γῆν, and disregards the consensus of the other versions in favour of an original ὅτε ἔπλασας τὴν γῆν; the natural equivalent to ἔπλασας is plasmasti[2], a reading which I have actually detected in two MSS. (L. 7 and O. 6). There are some corrections now generally accepted which seem to be of comparatively recent introduction, at any rate I have only noticed them in MSS. contemporary with the earliest printed text. To this class I would refer the change of et si to et ipsi, viii. 56, and of initium per consummationem to initium habet pariter et consummationem, ix. 5. The most striking alteration of this kind which I have observed is in viii. 44; in this verse the singular reading, hic pater et filius homo, to judge from the evidence before me, maintained its ground in the MSS. till the invention of printing, when it became recast in the form which, with but little variation, it has ever since retained: sic perit et similiter homo. At the same period a lacuna of long standing in vii. 113 (43) was filled up by the insertion of et initium, which the context suggests and the other translations confirm.

[1] C. 10 retains atria from Cod. S.

[2] τέκνα ἀποστάται (Is. xxx. 1), not τέκνα ἀποστάτου as Hilg. p. 208.

The investigation therefore of the sources of the present text forces us to the conclusion that many manuscript readings unhesitatingly adopted by editors can only be regarded as conjectures more or less ingenious, which must always be scrutinized with the greatest caution. In each case we are thrown back on the authority of [1] On the other hand, the MSS. exhibit corruptions equally startling; these sometimes result from the tendency to substitute the known for the unknown, as Armenii xv. 30, C. 3, 4, 9, O. 5, for Carmonii Cod. S.; Nazareth xiii. 45, C. 10, for Arzareth (that mysterious land which, after having so long baffled critics, has been discovered by Dr. Schiller-Szinessy to be nothing more than Terra alia, comp. ver. 40, the ארץ אחרת of Deut. xxix. 27, stereotyped in all its vagueness as a proper noun. See the Journal of Philology, Vol. III. 1870). In a few cases the religious feelings of the scribe have given a colouring to the text, as ut et ecclesiam timeant et trepidentur omnes xv. 29, C. 10, for ut etiam timeant..., even to the violation of the laws of grammar and of nature, as et mulieres ET HERETICI parient menstruatae monstra v. 8, which I have found with this interpolation in no less than three MSS. (C. 7, S, and L. 2).

[2] Another instance may be quoted to shew how liable these verbs are to be confounded: in viii. 14, for plasmatus est Cod. II. has plantatus est.

Cod. S., and with advantages to which a scribe of the middle ages could not aspire, such as the light to be derived from other ancient versions and from the researches of modern criticism, we must do our best to make the crooked straight and the rough places plain. But although the theory just propounded deprives us of the help which we might otherwise have expected from the later MSS., so many of which remain still unexamined, it will be some consolation to know that we shall not be left in hopeless dependence on Cod. S.; for Cod. A., which we have kept in abeyance during this discussion, not only restores to us the portion of the book which seemed irrevocably lost from the Latin, but, as we shall soon see, will henceforth be entitled to rank as a co-ordinate authority with Cod. S. in settling the text of this very difficult book.

The great similarity existing between these two MSS. will doubtless have been already remarked from the quotations in the preceding pages; this similarity can frequently be traced in the minutest details, both in the original and corrected readings. For example, in i. 36 Cod. A. supports Cod. S. in the reading et memorabuntur antiquitatum eorum[1]. The abrupt address in i. 38, Et nunc, frater, aspice cum gloria et uide populum uenientem ab oriente, is attended with many difficulties; by the easy substitution of fr̄ for fr̄, the reading superaspice found its way into many later MSS.[2], yet, strange to say, frater is not the original reading of either of our oldest authorities, for Cod. S. has (pr. m.) pater (pat̄), but p has been erased and fr written above, while the reading of Cod. A., partem (part̄e), differs so little in appearance from the word as first written in Cod. S., that it may be taken for a confirmation of that reading[3]. In ii. 15 mater, amplectere filios tuos, educa illos cum

[1] So apparently in most MSS. Fritzsche indeed retains the Vulg. et memorabuntur iniquitatum eorum, but I have not observed this variation in copies written before the 15th century. The mutilated form, iquitatum, assigned to T. (Zeitschr. d. Wissensch. Theol. VII. 334, but quoted as equitatum in the edd. of Hilgenf. and Fritzsche), stands midway between the two readings.

[2] Further corrupted to semper in Cod. H.

[3] Our first impulse is to refer the pater here and in ii. 5, ego autem te, pater, testem inuoco super matrem filiorum..., to the same person, but who is that person? Is it Ezra? The 'Erra pater' indeed, of modern times, occurs to us (see Addenda), but we lack evidence of the early use of such a title, not to mention that it would be singularly incongruous in an address from God to his prophet. Again, the language which immediately follows in ii. 6, 7, ut des eis confusionem... dispergantur in gentes..., looks certainly like a direct appeal to God himself. Or is it God the Father, thus addressed by the Son? It is true there is no formal introduction of Christ as a speaker, but echoes from his words meet us on every side. This explanation is well adapted to the context in ii. 5, and is there accepted by Hilgenfeld, but it will scarcely be regarded as admissible in i. 38. Can the reading in the latter passage have resulted from an error in translation? It has not been sufficiently recognized that the author of 4 Ezra i. ii. drew much of his phraseology from Baruch iv. v. Comp. e.g. ii. 2 with Bar. iv. 19, ii. 3 with Bar. iv. 11, 12, ii. 4 with Bar. iv. 17, 21, ii. 12

laetitia. Sicut columba confirma pedes eorum, the position given to columba naturally suggested the alteration to columnam[1], which has been adopted by Coverdale, 'make their fete as fast as a piler,' and has thus passed into the Geneva and Authorized versions; but that columba may be retained, without the unnatural association found in the Vulg., is proved by the text and interpunctuation common to both our MSS., mater complectere filios tuos educam illos cum laetitia sicut columba, confirma pedes eorum. The long-standing error, imperasti populo, iii. 4, for imperasti pulueri, is already in possession of the text in Cod. A. as well as in Cod. S. Their minute agreement in the next verse enables us to observe an intermediate stage in the transformation of et dedit tibi to et dedisti, for in both MSS. the letter s in dedisti is a later insertion[2].

Codd. A. and S. agree in the following readings: casui iii. 10 (the i is erased in Cod. A.), derelinquas altered in both to derelinqueres iii. 15, et offerre tibi[3] in eodem tuas oblationes iii. 24 (eodem altered to eadem in Cod. A.), tribus impii iv. 23 (in has been afterwards inserted before tribus in Cod. A.), de ea (for dicam) iv. 28 (so also Cod. T.); in the same verse Cod. A. has districtio (altered to destructio), Cod. S. destrictio[4]. Again, they agree in tu enim festinas uaniter (altered to inaniter in Cod. A.) with Bar. v. 8; and so also the language of the verse in question is evidently derived from Bar. iv. 36, 37, Περίβλεψαι πρὸς ἀνατολάς, Ἰερουσαλήμ, καὶ ἴδε τὴν εὐφροσύνην τὴν παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ σοι ἐρχομένην. ἰδοὺ ἔρχονται οἱ υἱοί σου οὓς ἐξαπέστειλας, ἔρχονται συνηγμένοι ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν ἕως δυσμῶν τῷ ῥήματι τοῦ ἁγίου, χαίροντες τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ δόξῃ. Circumspice, Ierusalem, ad orientem et uide... Comp. also Bar. v. 5, 6. If we assume then that the word which stood in the original Greek of 4 Ezra i. 38 was περίβλεψαι, or rather περίβλεψον (the latter has hitherto been quoted as the reading of the Cod. Vat. in Bar. iv. 36, incorrectly as it appears, for περίβλεψε (= -αι) is the form given in the edition of Vercellone and Cozza, Rome, 1872), this compound might easily have been mistaken for περ̄ βλέψον, which would at once account for the pater aspice of the Latin translator. To prove that the present Latin text exhibits a distorted image of the Greek, we need only compare the position of the next words, cum gloria, with the context in which μετὰ δόξης stands in Bar. v. 6.

[1] C. 1 has columpna (without stop), C. 9 sicut columnam, confirma.

[2] With the text thus restored: imperasti pulueri, et dedit tibi Adam corpus mortuum. comp. imperasti terrae ut crearet coram te iumenta et bestias et reptilia, et super his Adam, vi. 53, 54.

[3] Such is the obvious division of the words in the et offerr&ibi of Cod. S. (comp. in the same MS. ostender&ibi = ostendere tibi iv. 3), but an early corrector by an excusable oversight read et offerret ibi, and consequently altered et to ut.

[4] This reading of Cod. S. has been known from the time of Sabatier, but it seems to have been regarded by critics either as too insignificant to notice, or, if quoted, merely as an eccentricity in the spelling of the word, which has been universally adopted in the text, destructio. The authority of Cod. A. will lead, I believe, to a re-consideration of the long-neglected destrictio, for it better keeps up the metaphor which is expressed by the other versions. The Lexicons give no examples of destrictio or of districtio in the sense here required; cum et ipsum spiritum, nam excelsus pro multis[1] iv. 34, uenit iv. 35, ponderaui iv. 36, prorogas altered in both to interrogas iv. 52, conculcaucrunt qui (for conc. eum qui) v. 29, credebant (for non credebant)[2] ibid., aut (for an) v. 33, qui necdum v. 36 (so also C. 10, 11, and Syr.), uiuificauit v. 45, qui ante sed minores (s on eras. in A.) statu[3] v. 52, Initium vi. 1, decores (orig. -ris A.) vi. 3, et antequam aestimaretur camillum Sion[4] vi. 4, quaē (pr. m.) vi. 23, intuebatur vi. 29, turbatur altered in both to turbabatur vi. 36, odoramentis inuestigabiles (-lis in Cod. S.)[5] vi. 44. A word, which appears to be progenitum, is erased before saeculum vi. 55, in Codd. A. and S. Both have quam vii. 20 (quā altered to quō in Cod. A.), incorruptibile altered in both to corruptibile vii. 111 (41), Et nouem mensibus patitur tua plasmatio tuae creaturae quae in eo creata est, viii. 8, a passage which contains two anomalies of construction, apparently derived from the original. Comp. the Gk. of Hilgenfeld, καὶ ἐννέα μῆνας ἀνέχεται τὸ πλάσμα σου τοῦ κτίσματος τοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ κτισθέντος. The following words found in the Vulg. are absent from both MSS., et initium vii. 113 (43), irascaris viii. 45 (comp. the Or. Verss.), ut viii. 49 (but added later in both, in Cod. A. before plurimum, in Cod. S. before inter), et (before miserabiles) viii. 50 (this is a step towards bringing out the right construction as found in the Syr. &c.), mali viii. 53 (not in the Or. Verss.), est (before manifesta) ix. 5, casum x. 9 (this word is not represented in the Or. Verss. and is evidently introduced to help the construction). Codd. A. and S. seem to stand alone in reading nunc uitam viii. 60 (nunc is dotted above in Cod. S.). In ix. 16 sicut multiplicatur fluctus super but comp. the use of distringo in the Vulg., Et fructus eius distringet, Ezek. xvii. 9. Destructio was not the only attempt to emend the original, for we find distinctio in C. 6.

[1] Cod. S. has pro multis (not permultis). In Cod. A. qm̄ has been struck out before nam, and nam excelsus pro multis altered to ab excelso acceperis.

[2] In Cod. A. a corrector has changed quique to eos qui, so that the verse may now be read thus: Et conculcauerunt qui contradicebant sponsionibus tuis eos, qui tuis testamentis credebant, which conforms to the construction in the Syr. and Æth. versions.

[3] In v. 54, Cod. A. has minoris statutis altered to minores statu estis, Cod. S. minores statutis.

[4] As a distinguished Oxford Professor has lately quoted (Fors Clavigera, Letter xlvii. Oct. 1874), without misgiving, our Authorized Version of this passage, 'or ever the chimneys in Sion were hot,' I may remark that the textus receptus et antequam aestuarent camini in Sion is utterly destitute of credit. The only two MSS. which have any authority agree in the reading which I have given above. Camillum is for scamillum 'foot-stool.' Rönsch. p. 94, gives only scamillus, though Acts vii. 49, Cod. Bezae, to which he refers, has scamillum in the nominative; so also Matt. v. 35, Cod. Clarom. (scamellum, Cod. Sang. comp. scamello Jac. ii. 3, Cod. Corb.). For the metaphor comp. Lam. ii. 1. Aestimaretur is no doubt corrupt, we require in its place some such word as stabiliretur, firmaretur, or, as Hilgenfeld proposes, aedificaretur (among the guesses in MSS. we find edificarent (sic) camini in C. 6).

[5] See Rönsch, p. 112. His conjecture that Cod. S. has inuestigabilis is correct, but unnecessary, since it does not appear that the form ininuestigabilis has ever, as he assumes, been ascribed to that MS.

guttam Vulg., we find the reading multiplicat fructus in both MSS., the verb being here used intransitively in imitation of the Gk. πλεονάζει. Similarly in xiv. 16 tantum multiplicabuntur super inhabitantes mala, Vulg., the form multiplicabunt is found both in Cod. S. and in Cod. A. (pr. m.). A misunderstanding of this anomalous usage of the verb has led to the omission of super in ix. 16, Cod. A., and in xiv. 16, Cod. S. (supplied pr. m. in the latter case on the margin)[1]. In ix. 19 moribus[2] (for mores) is common to the two MSS. (comp. the other versions). Modern editors have without an exception retained the reading of the Vulg. o domine, TE nobis ostendens ostensus es patribus nostris in deserto ix. 29. This is doubtless one of the many instances found in our book, of a well-known Hebrew idiom[3], but the insertion of the acc. of the pronoun is not justified by a comparison of the analogous phrase, reuelans reuelatus sum xiv. 3. In fact te is one of those attempts at emendation which were introduced at the time of the first printed edition; Codd. A. and S. and apparently all MSS. before that date have IN nobis. In ix. 45 Cod. A. has ancillae tuae (altered to ancillam tuam), Cod. S. has ancill&uae. Both have proditi (not perditi) x. 22, as Ambrose also quotes it (Lib. I. de Excess. Sat.)[4], Uox exiebat xi. 10 ($\bar{\eta}$ stands above the line after uox in Cod. S.), and toto (not tanto) tempore xi. 16. In xi. 19, Cod. S. has omnibus auis, Cod. A. omnibus auibus[5]. The reading of Cod. A. in xi. 37 is et audiui quomodo (comp. the Syr., Æth. and Arm.), Cod. S. has the word audiui altered to uidi and so transmitted to the other MSS. Cod. A. agrees with Cod. S. and a large majority of [1] In ix. 16, multiplicat C. 3, 9, 10, multiplicatur fructus C. 1. In xiv. 16, multiplicabunt C. 1, 10, om. super C. 3.

[2] moribus C. 9, 10.

[3] It occurs, for instance, in iii. 33, iv. 2, 13, 26, v. 45, vi. 38, vii. 5, 14, 21, 67, 75, viii. 15, ix. 1, 29 (bis), x. 32, xi. 45, xiv. 3, 29, and even in the chapters attached to the end, as xv. 9; in all these examples the inf. abs. is expressed by the Lat. participle; in a few cases we find the abl. of the subst. as vi. 14, 31-32, vii. 67, and once the gerund xvi. 65. There are occasional efforts to get rid of this foreign construction, most frequently by the rejection of the participial element, as in viii. 15, x. 32, xi. 45, xiv. 29 Vulg., and in vii. 5, C. 10. In vi. 14 all MSS. had been led astray by Cod. S., and the true reading was only restored by an emendation of Van der Vlis. In vi. 31-32 auditu is omitted in C. 6, but preserved in most MSS.; in the Vulg. (and also in Cod. T.) it has been corrupted to audiui. Our English translators have generally given due force to this idiom, but not always; in v. 45, for instance, quoniam uiuificans uiuificasti a te creatam creaturam in unum is translated by Coverdale 'that thou lyuynge maker hast made the creature lyuynge at once,' and the influence of this rendering is felt in the Gen. and in the A. V. In ix. 29 Hilgenfeld's Gk. is based entirely on the faulty text of the Vulg., he claims indeed the support of the Syr. but ἡμῖν has no representative in that version, and the words ܐܬܓܠܝ ܐܬܓܠܝ would be the ordinary translation for φανερωθεὶς ἐφανερώθης, or rather ἀποκαλυφθεὶς ἀπεκαλύφθης.

[4] proditi has passed from Cod. S. into C. 3, 5, 11, D.

[5] omnibus auibus C. 10.

the MSS. in reading mugiens for rugiens xi. 37, and mugientem for et rugientem xii. 31[1]. Both Codices have emittit (altered to emisit in Cod. A.) and fluctum altered to flatum xiii. 10, occurrentes xiii. 18 (-es is erased in Cod. S.), in hac for in haec xiii. 20[2], prae medium xiv. 12 (-um altered to -o in Cod. A.). Cod. A. has et in terram Sion xiv. 31, Cod. S. has et in terra Sion (in having been inserted). Both have plebi (with s added at the end) xv. 1, exultans (altered to exultans in Cod. S.) xv. 53[3]. In xvi. 33 the oues of Cod. S. has been altered to homines in later MSS., but here also Cod. A. takes its place by the side of Cod. S. with the reading eo quod non transeat ouis per eam. In xvi. 39, the words cum parit are absent from both MSS[4] This list might be considerably extended, but I will now close it with a few passages, where I first recovered the true reading from Cod. A., but found, as soon as I had an opportunity of examining Cod. S., that in these points also the two MSS. originally coincided. There is a striking instance of this in iii. 7, where Cod. A. reads et huic mandasti dilegentiam unam tuam, et praeteriuit eam. The presence of diligentiam, that characteristic word in the Latin of the fourth of Esdras[5], and the harmony of the other versions, at once stamp this as the genuine text[6], while the reading of Cod. S.... diligere uiam tuam..., transmitted to nearly all later MSS.[7] and accepted by all editors, bears every mark of an alteration made to simplify the language. If we examine Cod. S. more closely, we shall have ocular demonstration of the way in which this alteration was introduced, for the last letter of diligere is written on an erasure, and we can still decypher faint traces of [1] C. 10 has rugiens xi. 37, but mugientem xii. 31.

[2] in hac C. 10.

[3] exultans C. 10.

[4] cum parit is not in C. 10.

[5] See below on vii. 37.

[6] With the passage thus restored compare the following extract quoted in the 'Pugio fidei' of Raymundus Martini, (pp. 674, 675): אר״ יוסי הגלילי צא ולמד זכות מלך המשיח ושכרן של צדיקים מאדם הקדמוני שלא נצטווה אלא מיצוה אחת בלא תעשה ועבר עליה ראה כמה מיתות נקנסו לו ולדורותיו... This is said to be taken from the Siphre; Edzardus, in his Annotat. (Wolf. Bibl. H. iv. 622) gives no other explanation than 'ex citat. Salom.' Wünsche, who borrows the quotation (Die Leiden des Messias, p. 65), adds to the reference 'S. 121.' But I have in vain searched for it in the Siphre. Dr. Schiller-Szinessy, however, who kindly lent me his aid, has succeeded in finding a similar passage, not in the Siphre, but in the Siphra, xii. § 10 (ed. Weiss, Wien, 1862, fol. 27 a, col. 1), as well as in the Yalkut (Livorno, 1650, fol. 220 b, § 479), and in Rashi on Lev. v. 17, in all of which places the words that especially illustrate the point under discussion appear with some slight variations. But should this be really the source of Raymundus Martini's quotation, it may be here mentioned that in other respects there are material discrepancies, such as the absence of all Messianic application in these three authorities; a fact which it would be well for those to consider who continue to appeal to this extract as 'ein sehr klares und bestimmtes Zeugniss von dem Verdienste des Messias.'

[7] One variation may be noted, viz. diligere mandata tua et praeteriuit ea, Cod. H.

the termination -tiam; again it will be seen that uiam results from the erasure of the second stroke of the n in the original text unam. Cod. A. has extincta in viii. 53, and this (not et tincta) is also the reading of Cod. S. Chap. xiv. 11 stands thus in the two latest editions: Duodecim enim partibus diuisum est saeculum, et transierunt eius decimam et dimidium decimae partis. For decimam, Cod. A. has decem iam, and whatever difficulties still remain with regard to the calculation[1] in this and the following verse, the construction thus obtained is confessedly more natural, for the reading of the Vulg. decima is a step in this direction, and our English translators[2] by a happy instinct have expressed the very words of Cod. A. The reading Xam has been invariably assigned to Cod. S., but looking at it in the light thrown on the passage by Cod. A. we at once detect the erasure of an i before the a, so that here again the two MSS. concur. In the example which I will now adduce, the correct expansion of an abbreviation will bring the two MSS. into unison. In ix. 19 Fritzsche edits: tunc enim erat nemo, and remarks pro 'nemo' in Codd. nescio quo errore legitur 'quisque,' but Cod. S., which is the source of this reading, has quisq; this contraction must here stand for quisquam[3], which is the reading of Cod. A.; but adopting this, we must proceed a step further, and, substituting nec for tunc, restore the whole passage thus: et nemo contradixit mihi, nec enim erat quisquam (οὐδὲ γὰρ ἦν οὐδείς)[4]. In xiii. 48—49 it is only a faulty interpunctuation that keeps the two MSS. apart. Cod. A. reads correctly ...intra terminum meum sanctum; erit ergo... The very same words stand in Cod. S.; but the insertion of a stop (.;) before, instead of after, sanctum (sc̄m) has produced an impression, shared alike by ancient copyists and modern collators, that the reading of that MS. is ...intra terminum meum. Factum erit ergo...

It would however be a mistake to conclude from this long catalogue of resemblances that in Cod. A. we have little more than a repetition of the text given in Cod. S. Quite as many divergences in reading[5] might be quoted to shew that,

[1] In C. 10 there is an attempt to remove this numerical confusion by reading undecimae for decimae in both verses.

[2] Coverdale's translation is 'For the tyme is deuyded in to twolue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of tho tenth parte.' Similarly the Gen. and A. V.

[3] C. 11 preserves the abbreviation from Cod. S. In C. 10 there is a fair attempt at emendation, tunc non erat quisquam.

[4] In xiii. 52, sic non poterit quisque super terram uidere...Cod. S. has the same contraction, and Cod. A. has quisquam (after terram). The requirements of the construction have introduced the word quisquam into several MSS., as C. 1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 11, D.

[5] Many specimens of readings peculiar to Cod. A. may be gathered from these pages; a few more are here subjoined, some of which may prevent us from overestimating the value of that authority: crescunt however close the relationship between the two MSS., they are yet perfectly independent of each other. In proof of this we may appeal to the fact that in several places, where there is a lacuna in Cod. S., the Latin text is found complete in Cod. A. For instance, this MS. first supplies us with the correct form of the subject in vii. 112 (42): propter hoc orauerunt QUI POTUERUNT pro inualidis. The omission as usual must be referred to homœotel.[1] Cod. A. first fills up the gap in ix. 20, thus:

Et consideraui saeculum meum, ET ECCE PERDITUM ERAT ET ORBEM MEUM, et ecce erat periculum.

Comp. the Syr. It is true that here the missing words may have stood originally in Cod. S., for a line has been erased in this place, but I think that the erasure will be best accounted for by supposing that in the confusion arising from the similarity of the clauses, some words were by mistake written twice. In ix. 21 Cod. S. has et peperci eis ualde; but ualde does not fall in with the spirit of the next words, et saluaui mihi acinum de butru. From Cod. A. we recover the lost particle et peperci eis UIX ualde[2]. Through the same authority another passage which has been curtailed by a common oversight will be henceforth restored to its proper proportions: Et dormiui illam noctem et aliam sicut PRAECEPIT MIHI. ET FACTUM EST SECUNDA NOCTE ET ALIA SICUT dixerat mihi et uidi somnium, x. 60, xi. 1. And, lastly, the kingdom which appeared to Daniel is described more explicitly in Cod. A. as regnum QUARTUM xii. 11. Enough has been said to prove the independent position which Cod. A. occupies, but it may still be asked whether there are absolutely no readings that have possibly filtered through, if not from Cod. A. at least from some kindred MS. now lost, into one or other of the later copies. I confess that at first there were some for creuerunt i. 6, Testamentum for sacramentum ii. 7, populo for pupillo ii. 20, secreta noctu iii. 14, tremefecisti iii. 18, caelum for saeculum iii. 18, faciunt Babylonii iii. 31, sicut haec Jakob iii. 32, flatus iv. 5, tecum cogita altiss^{imi} scientiam non... iv. 10, mensura mensuraui saecula et tempora iv. 37, quem considerasti v. 27, defectionem for defatigationem v. 35, et uiuent et seruabuntur vi. 21, Leuitam vi. 49, Leuitae vi. 52, altum et spatiosum et immensum vii. 3, si enim declinaueris viii. 32, munitio for motio ix. 3, tibi experienda x. 49, orationem for deprecationem xiii. 14, qui^{d} in corde aut in profundo maris ^{sit}sic...xiii. 52,...ei secreta multa temporum xiv. 5.

[1] In verse 115 (45) of this chapter, saluare eum qui periit is absent from both MSS., being, as before stated, a conjectural insertion introduced into subsequent copies. But in Cod. A. the words neq. euerterit· qui uictus fuerat, which have been added on the margin to be attached to the end of the verso, may preserve some element of the original reading; for uictus fuerat comes nearer to the Syr. and Æth. versions than the periit of later MSS.

[2] Similarly the Syr. and Æth. versions. In the Arab. the reading of the two MSS. is not (as Ewald edits) فعطفت بوجعى, but فعطفت بوجهى.

isolated cases which perplexed me, where the bulk of the MSS. seemed to agree with Cod. A. and not with Cod. S.[1]; a subsequent collation however of the latter MS. and a careful attention to the erasures served to dispel these difficulties. Yet still it would be possible to draw up a pretty long list of readings that are found in Cod. A. and other MSS., but not in Cod. S. I believe that all of these will prove on examination to be mere accidental coincidences to be explained by the ordinary tendencies that produce fluctuations in the text[2].

[1] The following readings ascribed to Cod. S. would be clearly incompatible with the theory that all later MSS. may be traced back to this source alone:

unde sit iv. 4 S. Vulg., quare A. and the later MSS.

diebus tantis vi. 28 „ „ tantis temporibus „ „

ipsum xiii. 58 „ „ tempora „ „

I find however in each of these places that Cod. S. really agrees, not with the Vulg., but with Cod. A. and the rest of the MSS. In vii. 18 the insertion of in fine (which Hilgenf. adopts for his text) seems to separate Cod. S., not only from all other MSS., but also from the Vulg. The error in this case arose simply from not observing the difference of type in the foot-note of Sabatier, where he refers to the last word in the verse: 'MS. Sangerm. in fine non viderunt, pro non videbunt.' My collation of Cod. S. has in several other points brought out more clearly the relation in which that MS. stands to the rest, as the following corrections will shew:

Achiae i. 2, ex eo iii. 21, babillonem (m erased) iii. 28, in sacculum iii. 34, per nomina inuenies iii. 36, potest iv. 9 (hence potest C. 4, 5, 10, 11; potes C. 1, 3, 7, 8, 9, H.), flamma, et uidi iv. 48, superauerant iv. 49 (so C. 3, 4, 5, &c.), fortitudinem v. 55, uisitas v. 56, aut sequentis vi. 7, quo apparerent tunc vi. 40 (tunc is in C. 3, 4, 5, &c. and in A.), creauit altered to certauit vii. 127 (57) (creauit C. 3, 9), prophetes viii. 5 (so C. 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, &c.), fructum viii. 10, quae (altered to qui) fecit viii. 60, mense ix. 19, glorificamini ix. 31 (so C. 5, 9, H.), cum timore x. 26, cōmoueretur altered to comederetur x. 26 (the latter in C. 3, 9, 10), inhabitabunt xi. 40, om. tua xi. 43 (so C. 3, 5, &c.), renouabit xii. 23, manducabam xii. 51, om. ut xiii. 32, om. cum xiii. 46, superant xiv. 12, qui eam exterruerunt xv. 45, p̄da xv. 63.

[2] This will be best illustrated by a few characteristic examples: Latilibus ii. 31 S., latibŭlis A., latibulis C. 1, 3, 4, 5, &c. (We find two attempts to emend the above error of Cod. S.: (1) lateribus L. 7, T., Vulg., and (2) latibulis C. 1, 3, 4, 5, &c. The latter was successful); uoluptate iii. 8 S., C. 3, 4, 10, 11, &c., uoluntate A., C. 5, 12, L. 4, 7, W. (These words constantly interchange); seruare iii. 36 S., C. 7, 8, seruasse A., C. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c., Vulg.; qui inuocatus est iv. 25 S. and most MSS., quod inuocatum est A., C. 10, Vulg.; Hieremihel archangelus iv. 36 S., Iheremiel angelus C. 5, Ieremiel archangelus L. 1, 2, 3, 4, Vulg., archangelus Oriel A., Uriel archang. C. 10, Urihel archang. C. 6, Huriel archang. C. 7, 8, L. 7. (Instead of Hieremihel, the name of the angel who replies to the souls of the righteous, which occurs nowhere else in the book, it was natural for a scribe to write Uriel, the name of the angel then speaking with Ezra; this substitution was made several times independently, e.g. in Cod. A., in some later MSS., and also in Arab.²); egressos v. 5 S., et gressus A. and most MSS.; Spalthihel v. 16 S., Phalthiel A., C. 4, L. 1; sicut in nouissimorum...nec in priorum v. 42 S., sicut non nouiss....nec priorum A. and most MSS.; nunc vii. 132 (62) S., C. 1, 3, 4, 5, &c., om. nunc A., C. 2, Vulg.; thesaurus mortalitatis viii. 54 S., thesaurus inmortalitatis A. and the other MSS.; habitatio in Hierusalem x. 47 S., similarly C. 2, Vulg., om. in A., C. 1, 3, 4, 5, &c. (comp. ruina Hierusalem x. 48); temporum finem et temporum nouissima xii. 9 S. &c., finem et temporum omitted through homœot. in A., C. 2, Vulg.; esca xii. 51 S., C. 1, 3, 4, 5, &c, mihi aesca A., mihi esca C. 7, esca mihi Vulg.; absconsa in absconsis certa; hic nouit adinuentionem uestram xvi. 63, 64 S., terrae for certa D., T.,

I will now bring forward a few more noteworthy readings of Cod. A., some of which throw a new and unexpected light on dark passages of the Latin version.

The MSS. seem to be nearly equally divided between the readings et in ira agebant and et mira agebant in iii. 8[1]. A similar parallelism in Gen. xlix. 6 might be alleged in favour of the former, but to this the other versions are opposed; they rather support the reading of Cod. A., et impie agebant, which is also more in accordance with the style of the translation. Comp. iii. 30, vii. 18, viii. 35. Perhaps no word in the book has been more perplexing to editors than exterius, which is the reading of Cod. S. and most other copies in the following passage: et iam exterius corrupto saeculo iv. 11. Among the few variations may be noted et iam ex te corrupto saeculo L. 7 (comp. T.). Volckmar thought that the original Gk. would have been best rendered by obnoxius; Hilgenfeld substitutes his own emendation: et qui existis in corrupto saeculo; Fritzsche, regarding the Latin as hopelessly corrupt, has relegated it to a foot-note. Cod. A. solves the difficulty by reading exterritus, i.e. exteritus, 'worn out,' 'corrupted' (see above, p. 15, l. 15). This form of the participle of extero is not recognised in Lexicons, but we have on the one hand, the perf. exteruerunt, as we must read it, in xv. 45, (comp. conterui Rönsch, p. 287, and J. N. Ott, Neue Jahrbücher f. Philologie und Paedagogik, Leipzig, 1874, p. 792), and on the other, the substantive exteritionem[2] xv. 39, Cod. S. In iv. 29, Cod. A. has si ergo non mẽsum fuerit quod seminatum est. The corrected reading non messum at once commends itself to us by its agreement with the Syr. and Æth., while the original form non mensum explains the curious reading in Cod. S. nom̄ suū, which has produced a large crop of conjectures[3]. Instead of ...impleatur iustorum  areae iv. 39 Cod. S., we have in Cod. A. ...impleatur iustorum area[4], as Hilgenfeld suggests. Si non queris (not quaris) is the reading of Cod. S. in vii. 9; since it is quite unintelligible in the context in which it stands, it has passed through various transformations in the MSS., e.g., si non quis C. 9, 10, 11, Vulg., in absconsis absconsa. certe hic nouit adin. u. A., absconsa in absconsis. certe hic nouit adin. u. C. 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, &c. (But it must be noted (1) that in Cod. S. a point has been erased before certa, and (2) that the order of the words preceding certe is different in Cod. A.).

[1] et in ira agebant S., C. 4, 5, 6, 9, 11., L. 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, O. 1, 3, D.; et mira agebant C. 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, L. 5, O. 2, 5, 6, T., W., Vulg.

[2] So also C. 9, 10, C. 11 (on. marg.), exterritionem C. 3, 7, 8, exercitationem C. 11 (in text), H.; extritionem was the original reading of Cod. A., but it has been converted by the insertion of -ca- to extricationem.

[3] As non inuersum T., Vulg.; non in usum C. 6, O. 3, non usum C. 5; non cunlsum C. 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, D., L. 2, 3, 4, 5, O. 1, 2, 5, non inuulsum L. 1, non emissum O. 7.

[4] This is also the reading of Cod. H.

L. 9, si nunquam C. 3, 6, and so Vulg., si nusquam D., si non C. 4, 5, 7, 8, H., L. 1, 2, sine C. 1. Now Cod. A. has the same reading as that just quoted from Cod. S., but over queris (thus deleted) the word heres has been written, so that the passage may now be read si non haeres antepositum periculum pertransierit, quomodo accipiet haereditatem suam?, which is confirmed by the Syriac. The reading of the Vulg. in vii. 116 (46) ...sermo meus primus et nouissimus must have resulted from an attempt to improve the text, for the words ...et non nouissimus were transmitted by Cod. S. to the later MSS. This emendation in the Vulg. turns out in this instance to be correct, for it is supported not only by the Syr., Æth., and Arab., but also by Cod. A. Again, this MS. stamps with its authority the emendation of Hilgenfeld, solum modicum (for solum modum in Cod. S.) viii. 5, and that of Van der Vlis, in nouissimis diebus (for a nouissimis diebus in Cod. S.) x. 59. The reading non comparuit, also suggested by the scholar just mentioned, emerges from the confused text of Cod. A. in xii. 2 (-uit being written over an erasure). In xii. 31 the original reading of Cod. A. is loquentem ad aquilam et arguentem eam iniustitias ipsius[1] (for ...eas iniustitias ipsius, Cod. S.). In xii. 35 Cod. A. alone has the correct reading, et haec interpretatio eius (for et haec interpretationes Cod. S.), and in xiii. 17 erunt (for erant, Cod. S.). The preposition (in) before pericula, xiii. 19, is absent from Cod. A.; its presence in Cod. S. has effected the change of uiderunt to uenerunt in the later MSS. In xiii. 40, Cod. A. has haec sunt uiiii tribus[2], but ...decem..., the reading of Cod. S., has been written above. Cod. A. stands alone among the MSS. in reading interpretationes quas audisti xiv. 8, as the other versions require, instead of ...quas tu uidisti Cod. S. In xv. 29, et exient nationes draconum Arabum...et sic flatus eorum...fertur super terram, we find in Cod. A. an important variation for sic flatus, viz. sibilatus[3]. The word contentio, xv. 33, has been accepted by editors solely on the authority of later MSS., for Cod. S. has constantia; in Cod. A. the passage stands thus: et inconstabilitio regno

[1] So also C. 7, 8. (This is another illustration of agreement between Cod. A. and some of the later MSS.) Various attempts have been made to obviate the unusual construction of the verb, e.g. arguentem eam et iniustitias ipsius C. 3, 5, 9. 11, D., T., Vulg., arguentem eam iniusticiis ipsius C. 10, arguentem iniustitias eius H., and in Cod. A. eam has been expunged by a corrector. In the next verse we have an instance of arguo with two accusatives, et impietates ipsorum arguet illos, Cod. S., and again in xiii. 37 Cod. A., S. and Vulg.; comp. Plaut. Men. v. 5. 37, Caecilius Stat. l. 149 (Comic. Rom. Fragm. ed. O. Ribbeck), and Prov. xxviii. 23, in the Old Lat. Speculum, qui arguit hominem uias suas (Mai, Nov. Patr. Bibl. i. 2, p. 45).

[2] The Æth. has also nine tribes; in the Syr. and Arab. the number is nine and a half.

[3] The only example of this word given in the Lexicons is from Caelius Aurel. de Morb. Acut. ii. 27, accedente spirationis persecutione cum quodam illorum. The text of xv. 51 is: Infirmaberis. ut non possint te suscipere potentes et amatores Vulg., but for possint te, Cod. S. has possituos, and Cod. A. possintuos, but with the letter s written over ...nt erased; we may therefore venture to restore the passage thus: ut non possis tuos suscipere potentes et amatores. For surgebit xvi. 10, Cod. S., we read in Cod. A. horrebit.

In a short passage of the book we get a glimpse of the Latin text of a somewhat earlier period, for the Prayer of Ezra (viii. 20—36) has been handed down as an extract in a few MSS. of the Bible, the oldest of which is anterior to Cod. S., e.g. in the Cod. Vatican. reginae Sueciae num. 11, Saec. VIII. (= Cod. Vat.), in the Bibl. Ecclesiae Aniciensis Velaunorum, Saec. IX. (= Cod. Colb.), both collated by Sabatier, in a MS. of the Latin Bible in the Univ. Library of Jena, Saec. XIV. (= Cod. Jen.), collated by Hilgenfeld, in a MS. of Trin. Coll. Dubl., Saec. XIV. (= Cod. Δ.), and in a Bodl. MS., Saec. XV. (= Cod. O. 8), as well as in some other biblical MSS., which I shall hereafter notice; it also occurs in the Mozarabic Liturgy[1]. Now Cod. A., although maintaining in these verses its close connexion with Cod. S., yet in a few instances rather reflects the text transmitted by the above authorities; thus we have qui habitas in aeternum viii. 20, Vat., Moz., Colb., Jen., Δ., O. 8, qui habitas in saeculum Cod. A., comp. the Syr. and Æth., while Cod. S. reads qui inhabitas saeculum, and in viii. 28 qui ex uoluntate tuum timorem cognouerunt, Colb., Jen., O. 8, and Moz. (ed. Migne), qui ex uoluntate; tuum timorem cogn. Cod. A., comp. the Syr., Æth., and Arab., ...ex uoluntate tuam timorem... stands in Cod. S. and has naturally led to ...ex uoluntate tua timorem... in the copies made from it. In viii. 29, Vat., Colb., Jen., Δ., O. 8, as well as Moz. (ed. Migne), have pecorum, which is also the reading of Cod. A., whereas pecudum is the reading of Cod. S. In viii. 30, Vat., Colb., Moz. (as given correctly by Sabatier), Jen., O. 8, and Cod. A. have sunt iudicati, Cod. S. has iudicati sunt (scarcely Iudicati..., for the first letter is more probably a lengthened 'i')[2].

sibilatu uehementi, atque aspero.

[1] Liturgia Mozarabica, Vol. II., Breviarum Gothicum, Cant. LXI. p. 878 (Migne, Patrologia Lat. Tom. LXXXVI.). It is singular that the Abbé Le Hir searched in vain for this quotation (Études Bibliques, I. p. 141); he was naturally puzzled at the reference given by Volckmar ('Missale Romanum Mozarabicum, missa in feria post Pentecosten p. 136' D. 4te Buch Ezra, p. 273), but a little consideration might have enabled him to see a confused combination of two distinct works in this 'titre bizarre,' viz. the Miss. Rom., where chap. ii. 36, 37 is quoted, as Basnage points out (comp. Fabricius, Cod. Pseudep. V. T. Ed. 2, II. p. 191), and the Brev. Mozarab., which contains the long quotation from ch. viii.

[2] In verse 33 we read, iusti enim Colb., Jen., Δ., O. 8, iustus (altered to -ti) enim Cod. A., while iusti alone is assigned to Cod. S., but the reading of this MS. was rather iustus or iustis (altered to iusti) followed by enim (now erased).

It is however in chapters xv. and xvi., which together form the 5th book of Esdras in the majority of MSS., that the text of Cod. A. differs most widely from that of Cod. S.; as an example we may compare xvi. 20—23 according to the two recensions:

Cod. A.

20 Ecce famis plaga dimissa est, et tribulatio eius · tāquam mastix; castigatio in disciplina.

21 Et super his omnibus non se auertent ab iniquitatibus suis nec super has plagas · memorantur sempiterna;

22 Ecce erit annonae uilitas in breui super terram ut putent sibi esse directam pacem, tunc superflorescent mala super terram gladius et famis (altered to -es).

23 Et aperiant (altered to aporient) uitam super terram, et gladius dispersit (altered to disperdet) quae superauerint a fame.

Cod. S.

20 Ecce famis (altered to -es) et plaga et tribulatio et angustia, missa sunt flagella in emendatione.

21 Et in hís omnibus se non conuertent ab iniquitatibus suis, neque flagellorum memores erunt semper.

22 Ecce erit annonae uilitas super terram, sic ut putent sibi esse directam pacem, et tunc germinabunt mala super terram, gladius famis (altered to -es) et magna confusio.

23 A fame enim plurimi qui inhabitant terram interient, et gladius perdet caeteros (ceteros written above) qui superauerint a fame.

Again, a few verses lower down we have,

Cod. A.

30 Quemadmodum relinquentur (altered to -quuntur) in oliueto tres uel quattuor oliuae,

31 Aut sicut in uinia (altered to -ea) uindimiata (altered to -dem-): & subremanet racemus patens · ab scrutantibus uindimiam (altered to -dem-) diligent̄ (two letters erased at end).

32 Sic remanebunt...

Cod. S.

30 Quemadmodum relinquentur in olineto et singulis arboribus tres aut quatuor oliuae, 31 Aut sicut in uinea uindemiata racimi (altered to -ce-) relinquentur ab his qui diligenter uineam scrutantur.

32 Sic relinquentur...

In these two chapters we have no Oriental version to assist us in the criticism of the Latin text, and therefore quotations from early writers would be here especially welcome, yet hitherto one only has been pointed out by editors, viz. a short citation from xvi. 60 by Ambrose[1]; but some centuries before the date of our two oldest MSS. several verses had been quoted from 5 Esdr. (=4 Esdr. xv., xvi.) by a writer of our own country[2]. It is a curious fact that the editors of Gildas have from time to time called attention to the peculiar text of these extracts[3], without attracting the notice of a single writer on this book of Ezra. I now give in full the quotations in Gildas, and subjoin the passages as they stand in Cod. A., and in Cod. S. A comparison of these seems to shew that in Cod. A. we have at last discovered the recension of the text which was used by Gildas.

Gild. Epist.

Quid praeterea beatus Esdras propheta ille bibliotheca legis

xv. 21 minatus sit attendite, hoc modo disceptans: 'Haec dicit

[1] Non utique de hoc tecto dicit, sed de illo: extendit caelum sicut cameram, Epist. xxix. (ed. Bened. Tom. II. col. 909). This is evidently borrowed from 4 Esdr. xvi. 60, qui extendit caelum quasi cameram, and not from a somewhat similar passage in Is. xl. 22, which is thus cited by Ambrose: qui statuit caelum ut cameram, Hexaem. vi. § 2 (Tom. I. col. 116).

[2] In the so-called 'Epistola' of Gildas, generally ascribed to the middle of the sixth century. Thos. Wright thinks, that it was rather the work of an Anglo-Saxon, or foreign priest, of the seventh century (Biogr. Brit. Lit. p. 128), and his opinion is adopted by H. Morley (English writers, The writers before Chaucer, p. 219), but the earlier date is strenuously defended by Dr. Guest (Proceedings of the Archaeological Institute, 'Salisbury Vol.,' 1849, p. 35).

[3] 'Haec Esdrae testimonia nonnihil etiam differunt a uulgata lectione.' Gild. ed. Joan. Josselinus, fol. 52 vers., A.D. 1568. The latest editor, the Rev. A. W. Haddan, describes the passage from chap. xvi. as 'Vet. Lat. ap. Vulg., with considerable variations,' but his attempt to account for these variations is not satisfactory: 'Gildas also quotes... 2 Esdras (16 verses), in the Old Latin retained in V. but corrected by the Greek.' (Councils and Ecclesiastical Documents relating to Great Britain and Ireland, ed. by A. W. Haddan and W. Stubbs, Vol. I. pp. 70, 185, A.D. 1869.)

22 Dominus meus: Non parcet dextera mea super peccantes, nec cessabit romphaea super effundentes sanguinem innocuum 23 super terram. Exibit ignis ab ira mea, et devorabit funda-
24 menta terrae et peccatores quasi stramen incensum. Uae eis 25 qui peccant, et non observant mandata mea, dicit Dominus, non parcam illis. Discedite filii apostatae, et nolite contami-26 nare sanctificationem meam. Nouit Deus qui peccant in eum, 27 propterea tradet eos in mortem, et in occisionem. Jam enim uenerunt super orbem terrarum mala multa.'

Various readings from Cod. B. (=Dd. I. 17, Univ. Library, Cambridge)[1].

22. pareet B. romphea B. 23. terre B. 24. Ue B. 26. peceauit B.

5 Esdr.

Cod. A.[2]

xv. 21, 22 Haec dicit dn̄s ds̄; non parc& dextera mea sup peccantes ⸗ nec cessauit rumphea sup effundentes sanguinem in-* 23 nocuum sup terrā, & exiit ignis ab ira eius ⸗ & deuorauit fundamenta terrae · & peccatores
24 quasi stramen incensum, Uae hiis qui peccant ⸗ et non obseruant mandata mea · dicit dn̄s, 25 Non parcā illis: discedite filii apostate: Nolite contaminare
26 sc̄ificationē meā. Nouit ds̄ qui peccant in eū Propterea tra d& eos in mortem et in occisio

[1] This is still the only surviving MS. of Gildas, that can be appealed to for the extracts which I quote. Some fragments of the Cottonian MS. (Vitellius A. VI.), as Mr. E. M. Thompson has kindly informed me, escaped the fire, but these do not contain the quotations from 5 Esdras.

[2] In these extracts the text is printed line for line as it stands in Cod. A., and in Cod. S.

27 nem ; Jam enim uenerunt
sup orbem terrarū mala.

22. ecssauit altered to -bit.

COD. S.

xv. 21 Haec dicit dn̄s ds̄·;
22 Non parc& dextera mea sup peccatores. nec cessabit rumphea sup effundentes sanguinem innocuū sup
23 terram·; & exíit ignis ab ira eius & deuorauit fundamenta terrue . & peccatores
24 quasi stramen incensum·; Uę eis qui peccant. & non obseruant mandata mea · dicit 25 dn̄s·; Non parcam illis·; discedite filii a potestate·; nolite contaminare sc̄ificationē meā.
26 qm̄ nouit dn̄s om̄s qui delínqunt in illū.
ꝯpterea tradidit eos ds̄ in mortē & in occi-27 sionem·; Jam enim uenerunt sup orbem terrarum mala.

In the following quotation from the next chapter, the agreement between the text of Cod. A. and that given by Gildas is still more marked:

GILD. EPIST.

xvi. 3, 4, 5 Immissus est gladius uobis ignis, et quis est qui recutiet ea?
6 nunquid recutiet aliquis leonem esurientem in silua? aut nunquid extinguet ignem cum stramen incensum fuerit?
8 Dominus Deus mittet mala, et quis est qui recutiet ea?
9 Et exiet ignis ex iracundia eius, et quis extinguet eum?
10 Coruscabit, et quis non timebit? tonabit et quis non horrebit?
11 Deus cuncta minabitur et quis non terrebitur? A facie eius 12 tremet terra et fundamenta maris fluctuantur de profundo.

5, 6, 8. recuciet B. 9. exiet B., exibit ed. Jossel. quis qui ext. B. 10. Thonabit B. 12. de superbo B.

5 Esdr.

Cod. A.

xvi. 3 Inmiſsus est gladius uobis; & quis est qui auertat 4 eum? inmissus ÷ uobis ignis. & quis ÷ qui extin-
5 guat eū? inmiſsa sunt uobis mala· & quis ÷ qui recu-
6 cid& ea? Numquid recutid& aliquis leonē esurientem in silua? Aut nūquid extinguit ignē cū stramen incensū fuerit?
7 Aut numquid recutid& sagitā inmiſsam a sagitario forte?
8 Dn̄s d̄s mittit mala· & quis
9 recuciet ea? & exiet ignis & iracundia eius· & quis est
10 qui extinguat eū? curuscabit· & quis nun timebit? tonabit & quis non horre- 11 bit? Dn̄s cōminatur· quis non conterretur? A faciae 12 eius· tremd& terra a fundamento eius· mare fluctuat² de ꝯpfundo.

4. inmissus altered to immissus.
6. esurientem, s apparently added above es- and then erased.
9. exiet altered to exit.
10. curuscabit altered to corus-; nun altered to non.
11. conterretur, con erased.
12. tremet altered to tremit; fluctuat² altered to fluctuat.

Cod. S.

xvi. 3 Missus ē uob̄
4 gladius. & quis ē qui auertat illūd? Mis- sus ē uobis ignis. & quis ē qui extinguat
5 illūd? Missa sunt uobis mala & quis ē
6 qui repellat ea? Numquid repell& aliquis leonem esurientē in silua? aut extinguat ignem in stipulam moxque
7 coeperit ardere? Numquid aliquis repellit sagittā a sagittario forti
8 missā? Dn̄s ds̄ mittit mala & quis re-
9 pellat éa? Exi& ignis ex iracundia ei'
10 et quis ē qui extinguat eum? corrus-cabit & quis non timebit? tonabit.
11 & quis non surgebit? Dn̄s comminabit[2]?
& quis non funditus conteritur a facie
12 ipsius? Terra tremuit & fundam̄ta eius. mare fluctuat[2] de profundo.

3, 4. missus altered to inmissus (bis); illud altered to illum (bis).
5. missa altered to inmissa.
6. extinguat altered to -guet.
7. repellit altered to -let.
8. repellat altered to -let.
10. corruscabit, the first 'r' partially erased.

With these extracts I bring to a close my remarks on the textual criticism of the 4th book of Ezra, and of the chapters attached to it in the Vulg. The MSS. which I have examined will be found tabulated at the end of this Introduction. None of those hitherto discovered in English libraries can be ascribed to a period earlier than the 13th century. The references scattered through the preceding pages will enable us to single out the more interesting specimens in the list: Codd. C. 6, 12, L. 7, O. 3, and W., for instance, are often grouped together as exhibiting, like Cod. T., the state of the text in Cod. S. before many corrections had been made. Cod. C. 10 and occasionally Cod. C. 11 have preserved some difficult readings, which have been replaced in most other MSS. by attempted emendations. Cod. H. also sometimes retains readings of this kind, though embedded in much that is late and corrupt. Codd. C. 2, L. 8 and O. 4 may be dismissed without further remark, for the text of our book, as given by them, was probably copied from a printed edition. As it would be worth while to form gradually a complete catalogue of those MSS. of the Lat. Bible which contain the 4th book of Ezra, I will insert among the Addenda a supplementary list of all that have come under my notice. I take this opportunity of thanking numerous correspondents who have kindly assisted me in the search, and of stating at the same time that I shall be happy to receive further information on the subject from those connected with public or private libraries.

The references to the books quoted by me will, I trust, be readily understood; by Hilgenf. I denote the 'Messias Judæorum, ed. A. Hilgenfeld, Lips. 1869.' For Old Latin forms and constructions I have constantly referred to Rönsch's 'Itala und Vulgata, ed. 2, Marburg, 1875,' and the illustrations given by me may generally be regarded as supplementing his articles. As the missing fragment must henceforth be incorporated in chap. vii., I have ventured to make the necessary readjustment in the numbering of the verses; the awkward device of interpolating a chap. (vi.) in the middle of chap. vii. can scarcely be maintained any longer. In reprinting the patristic references to chap. vii. 36—105, I have not deemed it superfluous to subjoin various readings from a few MSS. which came to hand[1].

I regret that, owing to the little leisure at my disposal, the publication of this work has been delayed longer than might have been expected. It only remains for me now to return my thanks to Prof. J. Gildemeister for the letter which he has kindly allowed me to publish, to the Rev. F. J. A. Hort for examining the first proof of my notes on the Fragment and furnishing me with a series of valuable suggestions, and to Prof. W. Wright, who has been ever ready to aid me with his sympathy and counsel. To Dr. Ignace Guidi I am under special obligation for his careful collation of two Arabic MSS. in the Vatican. I will give a short account of their contents in the Addenda, reserving for a future work the full use of these important materials. M. J. Garnier also has a claim on my gratitude for the facilities afforded me during my visits to the Bibliothèque Communale at Amiens.

[1] The way in which the oft-quoted passage from Jerome has been passed on from editor to editor forms one of the many literary curiosities connected with the history of this book of Ezra. Instead of 'et proponis mihi librum apocryphum.....ubi scriptum est quod post mortem nullus pro aliis audeat deprecari,' Fabricius by a strange oversight printed ...propinas... and ...gaudeat...; his mistake reappeared in Laurence and even in Lücke (so far as he quotes the passage, Versuch einer vollst. Einleitung in d. Offenb. des Joh.), and has been repeated by Volckmar, Hilgenfeld, and Fritzsche.

LIST OF MSS.

Amiens.

A. = 10, Bibliothèque Communale.

Paris.

S. = 'Cod. Sangerm.', 11505, fonds Lat., Bibliothèque Nationale.

Cambridge.

C. 1. = Ee. iv. 28, University Library.
C. 2. = Dd. vii. 5, „ „
C. 3. = O. 4. 5, St. Peter's College.
(Chapters i. ii. are not in C. 3.)
C. 4. = O. 4. 6, „ „
C. 5. = 531 (ol. 601), Gonville and Caius College.
C. 6. = D. iii. 47, St. Catharine's College.
C. 7. = 2. A. 3, Jesus College.
C. 8. = C. 24, St. John's College.
C. 9. = I. 28, „ „
C. 10. = 2. 1. 6, Emmanuel College.
C. 11. = Δ. 5. 11, Sidney Sussex College.
C. 12. = 7. E. 3, Fitzwilliam Museum.

C. 13. = Ee. i. 16, University Library.
C. 14. = L. v. 24, Magdalene College.
(C. 13 and C. 14 contain only chapters i. ii.)

London.

L. 1. = Bibl. Reg., 1. B. viii., British Museum.
L. 2. = Bibl. Reg., 1. E. i., „ „
L. 3. = Harleian, 1793, „ „
L. 4. = Harleian, 2807, „ „
L. 5. = Harleian, 2814, „ „
L. 6. = Burney, 6, „ „
L. 7. = Sloane, 1521, „ „
L. 8. = Bibl. Reg. 1. E. vii., „ „
L. 9. = i. Sir M. Hale's MSS., Lincoln's Inn.
(In L. 9 many leaves have been cut out; 4 Ezr. begins with ch. vi. 13.)
W. = MS. of Lat. Bible (no class-mark), in the Library of Westminster Abbey.

Oxford.

O. 1. = Laud Lat., 12, Bodleian Library.
O. 2. = Hatton, D. 4. 8, „ „
O. 3. = Mus., D. 5. 20, „ „
O. 4. = Canon. Bibl. Lat., 67, „
O. 5. = ii., New College.
O. 6. = cccxvi., „
O. 7. = liv., Magdalen College.

O. 8. = Canon. Bibl. Lat., 71, Bodleian Libr.
(O. 8 contains only 4 Ezr. viii. 20—36.)

Holkham.

H. = MS. of Lat. Bible in the Library of the Earl of Leicester.

Dublin.

Δ. = A. 1. 12, Trinity College.
(Δ. contains only 4 Ezr. viii. 20—36. I am indebted for a transcript of these verses to the Rev. Dr. B. Dickson.)

Zürich.

T. = 'Cod. Turicensis,' C. 16. 5, Stadtbibliothek.
(Collated by O. F. Fritzsche.)

Dresden.

D. = A. 47, Königl. öffentl. Bibliothek.
(Collated by A. Hilgenfeld.)

non do2mıent ; & ap (v. 36) parebıt locuf to2mentı · & cum ıllo erıt locuf re
(fol. 62. r. b.)

quiſitionıſ; & chıb*a*nuſ ge*hen nae oſtend&ꝫ · & contra eam ıocundıtatıſ paradı ſuſ & dıc& tunc altıſſim
*a*d exeıtataſ gentef , uıd&e & ıntellegıt*e quē negaſ tıſ✓ uel eui non feruıſtuſ uel euiuſ dıligentıaſ ſpre uıſtuſ , uıd&e contr*a* & ın contr*a* ✓ hıc ıocundıtaſ & requıef✓ & ıbı ıgnıſ & to2ment*a* , haec autem loquêrıſ ✓ dıcef *a*d eoſ; ın dıe ıudıcı hıaec talıſ✓ qui neq; ſolem · neque lunā · (v. 40) neque ſtellaſ . neque nu bem ✓ neq; tonıtruum · neq; co*ruſcatıonem · neq; uentum neq; *a*quā ✓ neque aerem nequ&e nebr*a*ſ✓ neq; ſero ✓ ne que mane ✓ neque aeſt*a* tem · neque uaer · ne que ẹſtūſ neq; hạemē · xeq; gaelu · neque frı guſ✓ neque grandınē · neq; pluuı*a*m ✓ neque ro2ē · neque meridiem · neque noctem · neque ante lucem . neq; nıto2ē ✓

(fol. 62. v. a.)

neque clarıtaſ · neque lux :
nıſi ſolūmodo ſplendo2em clarıtatıſ altıſſimi ✓ unde omneſ ıncıpiant uidere quę ante poſita ſunt , ſpatı um enim habebıt ſicut ebdo mada* *a*nno2um ; hoc eſt ıudıcıū meum & conſtitutı o euſ✓ tbı autē ſoli oſtendı haec , Et reſpondı tunc & (v. 45) dıxı ✓ dne & nunc dıco ; beatı  praeſenteſ & obſerv*a*nteſ quae autem conſtituta ſ✓ ſed & quib; liſ er*a*t o2atıo me*a* · quiſ enim eſt de preſentıb;
qui non peecaunt ✓ uel quiſ n*a*tuſ qui non preteribıt ſponſionē tu*a*m ✓ Et nunc ui deo qm̄ *a*d paucoſ ptinebıt futurā *fa*eculi ıocundıt*a*tem f*a*cere ✓ multiſ enim to2m t*a* , mereunt enim in noſ · eo2 m*a*lum · quod noſ *a*bel̄naū ab liſ✓ & dedux noſ in corrup tionem · & ım ıtiner*a* mo2tiſ ; oſ tendit nobiſ ſemṭaſ ꝑdıtionſ & longae feeit noſ a uit*a*, & hoc non paucoſ ſed paene omneſ qui creati ſunt , & reſ pondit *a*d me & dixit ,

(fol. 62. v. b.) audı me & ſtruam te ✓ & de ſequentı corrıpıam te, (v. 50) Propter hoc non ſufficit altıſſimo unum ſaeculum ſed duo, tu enım quıa dıxıſ tı non eſſe multoſ ıuſtoſ ſed paucoſ · ımpıoſ uero mul tıplıcarı ✓ audı ad haec; lapı deſ electoſ ſı habuerıſ pau coſ · ualde ad numerum eoꝝñ componeſ eoſ tıbı, plumbum autem & fictile habundat, & dıxı; dñe · quomodo pote rıt ✓ & dıxıt ad me, non hoc ſolum modum ſed ınterro ga terram & dıc& tıbı ✓ adula (v. 55) re eı · & narrabıt tıbı · dı cenſ; enım & aurum creaſ · & argentum · & aeramen tum ✓ & ferrum quoque & plumbum · & fictile; multıplı catꝫ autem argen tum ſup aurum · & aera mentum ſup argentum · & ferrum ſup aeramentū plumbū ſup ferrum ✓ & fictile ſup plumbū, aeſtıma & tu quae ****

ſınt praeſıoſa & deſide rabılıa ✓ quod multıplıcatꝫ

(fol. 63. r. a.)

aut quod rarum naſcıtur, & dıxı; dominatoꝝ dñe · qd *abundat ulıuſ ✓ quod enım enım rarıuſ praeſıoſoſ ÷, & reſpondıt ad me & dıxıt
In te · ſtant · pondera quae cogıtaſtı ✓ qm̄ quı hab& quod dıfıcile ÷ ✓ gaud& ſup eum quı hab& habundan tıā; ſic & amare promıſ (v. 60) ſa creatura, ıocunda boꝝ enım ſup paucıſ · & quı ſaluabuntur; propterea quod ıpſı ſunt quı gloꝝıam meam nunc dominatıo nem fecerunt · & per quoſ nunc nomen meum nom̄natum eſt; & non conſtrıſ taboꝝ ſup mul tıtudınem eorum quı pe rıerunt, ıpſı enım ſunt quı uano nunc aſſımıla tı ſunt & flāmae ✓ ad ſımılatae fumo adaequa tı ſ & exarſerunt ✓ ferıe runt & extınctı ſunt, & reſpondı & dıxı, O tu * ter ra quıd peperıſtı · ſı ſenſuſ  factuſ ÷ de puluere ſicut & cæra creatura ✓

(fol. 63. r. b.)

melius enim erat ipsum puluerem non esse natum ✓ ut non sensus inde fier&, nunc autem nobiscum eres est sensum · & propter hoc torquemur, qm̄ scientes (v. 65) perimus, lugeat hominum genus ✓ & agrestes bestiæ la&entur; lugeant homines qui nati sunt ✓ quadrupedia uero & pecora iocundien tur, multum enim melius est illis quam nobis, Non enim sperant indi cium · nec enim sciunt cruciamenta ✓ nec salutē post mortem repromis sam sibi, Nobis autem quid prod÷ qm̄ saluati saluabimur · sed tor̄ to tormenta bimur !✓ Omnes enim qui nati sunt · commixti sunt iniquita tib; ✓ & plenae ſ peccatis · & gra uati delictis; & si non essemus post mor tem in iudicio uenientis ✓ melius fortassis nobis
(v. 70) uenissē, & respondit ad me, & dixit, & quan

(fol. 63. v. a.)

do altissimus faciens faciebat saeculum: a dam & omnes qui cū eo uenerunt ✓ primū prae parauit iudicium ✓ & quae sunt iudicii, & nunc de sermonib; tuis intelle ge ✓ qm̄ dixisti . quia nobiscum creseit, qui ergo cōmorantes sunt in terra · hinc crucia buntur ✓ qm̄ sensum habentes · iniquitatem fecer̄ ✓ & mandata ac cipientes . non seruaue runt ea ✓ & legem eon sequuti · fraudauer̄ eam quā acceperunt, & quid habebunt dicere in iudicio !✓ uel quomo do respondebunt in nouissimis temporib; !✓ quātū enim tempus ex quo longanimitatem habuit * altissimus his* qui inhabi tant saeculum !✓ & non ꝓpt eos sed ꝓpt ea quae ꝓuduit tempora; & respondi ✓ & dixi, (v. 75)

(fol. 63. v. b.)

ſi ınuem gratıam co2ā te dn̄e ✓ demonſtra dne ſeruo tuo · ſi poſt mor tem · uel nunc · quando reddımuſ unuſ quıſ que anımam ſuam ✓ ſi conſeruatı conſerua bımur in requıe , donec uenıant tp̄ora ılla · ın quıb; ınchıef creatu ram renouare ; aut amo do cruchamur ✓ & reſ pondıt ad me & dıxıt , oſtendam tıbı & hoc , tu autem nolı* commıſceri cum eıſ qui ſpreuerunt ✓ neque connumeref te cum hıſ qui cruciantur , & enim ÷ tıbı theſauruſ operum repoſituſ a pud altıſſimum ✓ ſed non tıbı demonſtrabitur · uſque in nouiſſimſ tem po2ibuſ , Nam de mo2te ſermo ; quando ꝓfectuſ fuerıt tminuſ ſenten tıae ab altıſſimo · ut ho mo mo2ıatur · rece* *den te ınſpıratıone de co2po2e ✓ ut dımıt

(fol. 64. r. a.)

tatur ıterum ad eum qui dedıt adorare glo2ıam al tıſſimı*primum ; & ſi quidē eſſ& eorum qui ınſpıraverunt & non ſer uauer̄ uıam altıſſimı · & eo2um qui contempſer̄ legem eiuſ · & eorum qui oderunt eoſ · qui tıment eum ✓ hae* ınſpıratıoneſ · ın ha (v. 80) bıtatıoneſ non ingredıen tur · ſed uagantef erunt amodo in cruciamentıſ ✓ dolentef ſemp & trıſtef , uia prima ✓ quia ſpreuer̄ legem altıſſimi ✓ faecun da uia ✓ qum̄ non poſſunt reuerſionē bonā facere ut uiuant , tertia uia ✓ ui dent repoſitam mercedem hıſ qui teſtam̄tıſ altıſſi mi crediderunt , quarta uia ✓ conſiderabant ſibi in nouiſſimſ repoſitum cruciatum · quinta uia · (v. 85) uidentef alio2um habita culū ab angelıſ conſeruari cum ſilentıo magno , ſexta uia ✓ uidentef quē ad modū de eıſ ptranſientem crucia

(fol. 64. r. b.)

mentum , ſeptima ẽrucı aīntum uia * ē omnium quę ſupra dictae ſunt uiarū maıoꝛ ✓ qnm d&abeſcent ın conſuſionem ✓ & conſu mu̇nt² ın horroꝛıb; & mar ceſcent ın tımoꝛıbuſ ✓ uı dentes gloꝛıam altıſſimı coꝛā quē uidentes pecca uerunt ✓ & coram quo ın cıpıent ın nouiſſimıſ tem poꝛıb; ıudıcarı , Nam eo rū qui uiaſ ſeruauerunt altıſſimı ✓ oꝛdo ÷ hic ; quan do ıncıpı& ſeruarı a ua ſō coꝛruptıbılı ✓ ın eo tem poꝛe cōmoꝛatae · ferme runt cum laboꝛe altıſſimo , & omnı hoꝛa ſuſtınuer periculum · ut* pfectae cuſtodırent legıſlatoꝛıſ (v. 90) legem ✓ propter quod hic de huſ ſermo , ınprımıſ uident cum exultatıone multā gloꝛıam eıuſ ✓ qui ſuſcıpıt eaſ ; requieſcent enım p ſeptem ordıneſ , Ordo prim ✓ qnm cum la boꝛe multo certatı ſunt .
ut uınceꝛent cum eıſ pláſma

(ſol. 64. v. a.)

tum cogıtamentū malū .
ut non eaſ ſeducat a uı ta, Item ſaecunduſ oꝛdo qnm uıdent complecatı onem ın quo uagant² ım pıoꝛū animae ✓ & quae ın eıſ man& punıtıo ;
tertiuſ oꝛdo ✓ uıdenteſ teſtı monium quo teſtıfica tuſ ÷ eıſ q' plaſmaū eaſ ✓ quō uıdenteſ ſeruanē quę p fidem data ÷ lex, quar (v. 95) tuſ ordo ✓ ıntellegenteſ re quiem quem nunc ın promptuarıſ congrega tı requieſcent cū ſilen tıo multo ab angelıſ con ſeruatı ✓ & qu*e ın nouſ ſimıſ coꝛū manentem glo rıam , quintuſ oꝛdo ✓ ex ultanteſ · quomodo cor ruptıbile effugerint nunc & futuram quomodo hereditatem poſſeder , adhuc autem uıdenteſ anguſtam & plenum qnm liberatı ſunt ✓ & ſpatıoſum recıpere fruı neſcıenteſ & ınmoꝛ taleſ , ſextuſ oꝛdo ✓

(ſol. 64. v. b.)

quando eiſ oſtendit[2] quo modo incipi& nultuſ eorum fulgẽre ſicut ſol :✓ & quomodo incipient ſtellar[ũ] ſ adſimilari lumini · quomodo ñ corrupti , ſeptimuſ ordo · qui eſt om nib; ſupradictiſ maior :✓ qnm exultabunt cum ſi dutia ✓ & qnm confidẽt bunt non confuſi · & gau debunt non reuertenteſ , feſtínant enim [undere] uultum ✓ cui ſeruiunt inuenteſ :✓
& a quo incipiunt glorio ſi mercedem recipere , hic ordo animarum iuſ torum · ut amodo ſ anunti entur p̄dictae uiae eru ciatuſ ✓ quoſ patiunt[2] a modo qui neglexerint , (v. 100) Et reſpondi & dixi , ergo dabit[2] tempuſ ani mabuſ poſtquam ſepa rati fuerint de cor·po·rib; ut uideant de quo mihi dixiſti !✓ & dixit , ſep tem dieb; erit libertaſ earum · ut uideant quæ p̄dicta* ſ ſermoneſ ✓

(fol. 65. r. a.)

& poſtea congregabunt[2] in habitaculiſ ſuiſ , & reſpon di & dixi · ſi inueni gratiam ante oculoſ tuoſ :✓ demonſtra mihi adhuc ſeruo tuo · ſi in die iudicii iuſti impioſ excu ſare poterint[u] * : dep̄cari ℟ : uel eiſ altiſſimum ; ſi patreſ ℟ filiſ · uel filii ℟ parentib; :✓ ſi fratreſ ℟ fratrib; ſi ſ ad fineſ ℟ proximiſ ✓ ſi fiden teſ pro cariſſimiſ · uel ℟ fi do* ſ cariſimuſ :✓ ut ℟ eo intellegat aut dormiat aut manduc& · aut cur&* ; Et dix̄ ; ſic nũquã nemo ℟ aliquo ro (v. 105) gabit , Omneſ enim porta bunt · un℣ quiſ que tunc in iuſtitiaſ ſuaſ · aut iuſtitiaſ , & reſpondi & dixi , & quo modo inuenim℣ modo qnm roga*[ut] ꝑ[i] m℣ abraham ℟pt ſodomitaſ · & moꝛſeſ

(fol. 65. r. b.)

NOTES.

fol. 62. r. b. l. 28 The original reading was probably do2mbunt as in Cod. S. Comp. a similar change in fol. 65. r. a. l. 10, 11.

fol. 62. v. a. l. 1 ge∗hennae—e has been erased before h.
Similarly geẹhennam chap. ii. 29.

„ „ l. 2 oſtend&²—² was originally written as an inverted comma.

„ „ l. 6 intellegit∗e—a erased.

„ „ l. 7 fer∗∗inſtiſ—ui erased.

„ „ l. 18 co∗ruſcationem—appar. r erased. Comp. 'corruscatio' Gloss. Lat. Bibl. Paris. antiquiss. saec. ix. ed. G. F. Hildebrand, pp. 81, 149.

„ „ l. 24 ∗hạ̀emc̄—e erased.

„ „ l. 25 gạelu∗—ſ erased.

„ „ l. 28 ro2c̄—2 written over an erasure.

fol. 62. v. b. l. 5 quę—the ˛ below the e added in darker ink.

„ „ „ poſita—i seems to have been added above a and afterwards effaced.

„ „ l. 7 ebdomada∗—appar. ſ erased.

„ „ l. 9 t^{bi}—^{bi} has been added later.

„ „ l. 12 A word, probably qui, was prefixed to this line and afterwards erased.

„ „ l. 20 futurā—ā orig. ū.

fol. 63. r. a. l. 4 altiſſimo—mo orig. m℔.

„ „ l. 11 componeſ—m orig. n.

„ „ l. 12 An erasure after fictile.

„ „ l. 13 poteri—e written over an erasure, and r added at the beginning of l. 14.

„ „ l. 17 narrabit—b orig. u.

fol. 63. r. a. l. 26, 27 plumbū—b orig. m. Du Cange gives the form 'plummum' from a Charter of the 13th century. Comp. in English 'plummet,' and the surname 'Plummer.' A like assimilation takes place in 'commurat,' 'commusta' (=comb-), and in 'ammulantibus' (=amb-). Schuchardt, Vocal. des Vulgärlateins, I. 183, III. 318.

„ „ l. 28 haec erased at the end of this line.

fol. 63. r. b. l. 3 *abundat—probably h erased.

„ „ „ quod—orig. quid.

„ „ l. 4 pra&ıoſiŏſ—the final f orig. r.

„ „ l. 6 The two stops in this line written faintly by a later hand.

„ „ l. 11 ıocundabo2—orig. ıucundabo2.

„ „ l. 19 conſtrif tabo2—divided thus in the MS.; for the spelling comp. 'constristatus' Mark x. 22, Cod. Bobbiens. (Wiener Jahrbücher der Lit. Vol. 121.)

„ „ l. 22 uapoı is the result of an early correction, the last letter is retouched.

„ „ l. 25 ferbĕrunt—b orig. u.

„ „ l. 27 Prob. t̄ has been erased; ter is added in larger letters beyond the line.

„ „ l. 28, 29 Similarly ſuſ has been added after the end of l. 28, and appar. the same syllable erased at the beginning of l. 29.

„ „ l. 30 c&era—c&c written over an erasure.

fol. 63. v. a. l. 7 lugeat—e orig. ı.

fol. 63. v. b. l. 18 acceperunt—orig. accıperunt.

„ „ l. 23 quātū—^{n} has been added later.

„ „ l. 25 habunt—b has been retouched, ut is written over an erasure, and appar. ÷ erased at the end of the word.

„ „ l. 26 hı*f—ı erased.

fol. 64. r. a. l. 5 reddımuſ—ı orig. e, altered by a later hand.

„ „ l. 8 requıe—final e written over an erasure.

„ „ l. 15 nolı*—appar. ı erased. So nolı* chap. II. 27, VI. 10, IX. 13, X. 34, 55. 'nolii' Matth. I. 20, VI. 2, 7; John XII. 15, XX. 27, Book of Deer (ed. for the Spalding Club by J. Stuart, 1869). Luke VIII. 49. 50, Rushworth Gospels (ed. Skeat). Comp. audı* chap. VII. 2, VIII. 19, XI. 16, and 'oboediite' Hebr. XIII. 17, Cod. Clarom. (ed. Tischend.)

fol. 64. r. a. l. 17 connumereſ—orig. connumerıſ.

„ „ l. 21 apnd—orig. aput.

„ „ l. 28 rece* *den—the second e is due to an old corrector, and den is added beyond the line.

fol. 64. r. b. l. 3 A stop erased before prımum.

„ „ l. 4 qnd̄—e has been retouched.

„ „ l. 10 hac*—e written over an erasure; appar. e erased after it, as also in chap. XIII. 40.

„ „ „ ınſpıratıoncſ—e orig. ı.

„ „ l. 29 ua—a orig. a.

fol. 64. v. a, l. 2 Appar. ÷ erased, and ō substituted.

„ „ „ que̊ added later beyond the line.

„ „ l. 6 horrorıb;—orig. honorıb;. Comp. Ecclus. I. 14, where Cod. Amiat. has 'horribilis' and ed. Sixtino-Clem. 'honorabilis;' and Mal. I. 14, where the former has 'honorabile' and the latter 'horribile.' (See Bibl. S. Lat. V. T. ed. Heyse et Tischendorf.)

„ „ l. 10 quo—uo written over an erasure.

„ „ l. 19 ſuſtınuer̄—ı orig. e (corr. by later hand).

„ „ l. 20 ut*—appar. final ı erased.

fol. 64. v. b. l. 10 plaſmaū—orig. plaſmaū, ^{it} added in lighter ink.

„ „ l. 15 promptuarıſ—o orig. u.

„ „ l. 18 qu*e—a partially erased.

„ „ l. 22 corr^{n}ıptıbıle—e orig. ı.

„ „ l. 23 futuram—a orig. u.

fol 65. r. a. l. 5 ſtellar^{ū}—there is a trace of a mark of abbreviation above r.

„ „ l. 10 fidutıa—t orig. c.—NT (written in a compound form) added at the end of the line.

„ „ l. 11 confuſi—there is a slight trace of ſ written above u.

„ „ l. 20 quoſ—o seems to have been orig. a.

fol. 65. r. a. l. 30 p̄dictā*—prob. e erased.

fol. 65. r. b. l. 7 Prob. & erased in this line—uel substituted in the margin.

„ „ l. 9 uel written over an erasure.

„ „ l. 11 ad̄fineſ—e orig. ı.

„ „ l. 12 uel written over an erasure.

„ „ „ p̄ fí—added beyond the line.

fol. 65. r. b. l. 13 do*—o orig. u—final ſ erased.

„ „ „ carıſimuſ—final ſ written over an erasure—ı erased.

„ „ l. 15 cur&*—orig. cur&²—Et dıx̄; added at the end of the line.

„ „ l. 17 rogabıt—b orig. u.

„ „ l. 21 ınuenmus—uen written over an erasure.

„ „ l. 22 roga*—orig. rogaū, added in lighter ink.

4 EZRA VII. 36—105.

36 Et apparebit lacus tormenti, et contra illum erit locus requietionis; et clibanus 37 gehennae ostendetur, et contra eum iocunditatis paradisus. Et dicet tunc Altissimus ad excitatas gentes: uidete et intellegite quem negastis, uel cui non

(In the notes immediately below the text both the original readings and the later corrections found in the MS. are printed in Italics).

36. lacus locus. contra illum cum illo. requietionis requisitionis. eum eam

36. If we possessed only the Lat. vers., the locus tormenti of our MS. might pass unchallenged (comp. Luke xvi. 28, Cod. Bezae Lat.); but there can be no doubt that locus is an echo from the following clause, (as the second uenae is from the preceding clause in chap. iv. 7, where the MSS. have uenae...uenae for uenae...uiae), and that, with the authority of the other versions, we must read lacus tormenti. With this comp. cum deducerent eum ad infernum cum his qui descendunt in lacum, Ezek. xxxi. 16 Hieron. Vet. Lat. (a chap. from which other reminiscences may be traced in 4 Ezra), and de lacu miseriae, Ps. xxxix. 3 (so conversely in Rev. xviii. 17, qui in locum nauigat, Codd. Amiat. et Fuld., has been corrupted into qui in lacum nau., ed. Sixtino-Clement.). This phrase is rendered ὁ κόλπος τῶν βασάνων in Hilgenfeld's attempted restoration of the Greek: but ὁ κόλπος is derived solely from the Syr. ܟܘܒܐ, which is scarcely satisfactory; for this I propose to read ܟܘܒܐ 'puteus', 'fouea' = جب of the Arab. Compendium (Arab.²). For another instance of the confusion of the letters ܒ and ܟ in the MS., see chap. xi. 37, Ceriani's note. By these two slight emendations, the Lat., Syr., Æth., and Arab. versions are brought into harmony with one another, and all point to an original ὁ λάκκος τῆς βασάνου.

et contra illum erit locus requietionis] The Syr. and Æth. verss. suggest this emendation; requietionis was probably first corrupted into requisitionis, and the introduction of this new word involved the further change of contra illum to cum illo. In the Arab. vers. نياح (not نياخ) = Syr. ܢܝܚܐ. See Fleischer, Zeitschr. d. D. M. G., vol. XVIII. p. 291, and Com. de Baudissin, Transl. Aut. Arab. Libri Iobi quae supers. p. 111.

iocund. parad.] = ὁ τῆς τρυφῆς παράδεισος. Comp. the LXX in Gen. ii. 15 (Cod. Vat.), iii. 23, 24; Ezek. xxxi. 9, Joel ii. 3; the pl. τῶν τρυφῶν in Hilgenf. rests only on the ribbui of the Syr.

37. For Hilgenfeld's Gk. καὶ ἐρεῖ τότε ὁ ὕψιστος κατὰ τῶν λαῶν τῶν ἐξεγερθέντων I would substitute κ. ἐ. τ. ὁ ὕψ. πρὸς τὰ ἔθνη τὰ ἐξεγερθέντα, which best explains all the versions, not excepting the Syr., for πρὸς may be well rendered by ܠܡܕܒ in such a context, comp. Luke xviii. 9 Pesh.

38 seruiuistis, uel cuius diligentias sprenistis. Uidete contra et in contra: hic iocunditas et requies, et ibi ignis et tormenta; haec autem loqueris dicens ad eos in 39 die iudicii. Hic talis qui neque solem [habeat] neque lunam, neque stellas, 38, 39. dicens ad eos in die iudicii; Hic talis...dicens ad eos; in die iudicii h^{at}aec talis...

39. solem [habeat] solem.

For populis resuscitatorum, in Hilgenfeld's emended translation of the Arab., read populis qui resuscitati sunt (according to Ockley's construction), which is the correct rendering of the vulg. Arab. للامم الذين قاموا, and agrees with the other versions.

The word diligentiam, which occurs in chap. iii. 19 in parallelism with legem, has been a source of much perplexity to commentators; we have here another instance of the same peculiar use of this word. It naturally came to mean scrupulous attention to commands, and particularly to religious duties. Comp. diligentia mandatorum tuorum, Cic.; sacrorum diligentia, id.; tanquam diligentiam suam etiam ipsi Deo praeferentibus, Iren. iv. 11, Old Lat. trans.: just as, on the other hand, indiligentia is used for neglect of duty, or trespass, in the old Lat. vers. of Leviticus, ed. by Lord Ashburnham (1869): e.g. in chap. v. 16, 18, vi. 6, where the Gk. is πλημμέλεια; similarly chap. v. 19, Insuper enim habebit indiligentiam (not quaecunque deliquerit, as quoted by Ranke, Par Palimps. Wirceburg. p. 231) indiligens fuit ante Deum, where the Gk. is ἐπλημμέλησε γὰρ πλημμελείᾳ ἔναντι κυρίου. Comp. also v. 15. In other passages of this vers. πλημμελεῖν and πλημμέλεια are represented by negligere and negligentia. In these instances the Greek word doubtless suggested this translation, in accordance with the etymology which we find set forth at length by one who fondly clung to the Old Lat. vers. Et πλημμέλεια simile nomen est negligentiae: nam Graece negligentia ἀμέλεια dicitur, quia curae non est quod negligitur. Sic enim Graecus dicit, Non curo, οὐ μέλει μοι. Particula ergo quae additur πλήν, ut dicatur πλημμέλεια, praeter significat, ut ἀμέλεια quod uocatur negligentia, uideatur sonare sine cura, πλημμέλεια praeter curam, quod pene tantumdem est. Hinc et quidam nostri πλημμέλειαν non delictum, sed negligentiam interpretari maluerunt. In latina autem lingua quid aliud negligitur nisi quod non legitur, id est non eligitur? Unde etiam legem a legendo, id est ab eligendo latini auctores appellatum esse dixerunt. August. quaest. in Levit. § xx. The word diligentia, as used in the 4th book of Ezra, by a natural transition takes the meaning of that which is to be observed,—an observance; just as מִשְׁמֶרֶת by a similar process becomes associated with laws and ordinances. Gen. xxvi. 5; Deut. xi. 1. Comp. also observationes, Lev. xviii. 30 (Ashb.). In a paper read by me before the Cambridge Hebr. Soc. in 1869 I pointed out that diligere uiam tuam, ch. iii. 7 (Syr. = mandatum, Æth. = mandatum iustitiae), must stand in close connexion with diligentiam, iii. 19 (Syr. = mandata. Æth. = mandatum). I now find my conjecture confirmed by Codd. A. and S., both of which have in the former place diligentiam unam tuam. See p. 28.

38, 39. The Syr. and Æth. verss. suggest the following reading: haec loquetur ad eos in die iudicii, dies enim iudicii talis qui....

39. neque solem...] The Arab. alone inserts an additional noun here: In illo die non erit neque sol, neque lux, neque luna, neque stella, neque nubes... (lucem dans appended to sol in the Arm. seems from the context to be a mere expletive). We find the same sequence in Eccles. xii. 2 antequam tenebrescat sol, et lumen, et luna, et stellae, et reuertantur nubes...

[habeat] The insertion of some such verb is required by the structure of the sentence, and introduces less disturbance than the substitution of cui for qui and of the nom. for the accus. in the following nouns. Of the nine MSS. of the Æth. vers. in the Brit. Mus. one only (Or. 490) has the reading albātī ḍahaya 'non habet (dies iud.) solem.' The reading of the others albō ḍahay 'non est sol' favours the conjectural emendation of Van der Vlis, yet they do not all (see especially Or. 489) consistently maintain the nom. case throughout the series.

40 Neque nubem, neque tonitruum, neque coruscationem, neque uentum, neque aquam, 41 neque aerem, neque tenebras, neque sero, neque mane, Neque aestatem, neque uer, neque aestum, neque hiemem, neque gelu, neque frigus, neque grandi-42 nem, neque pluuiam, neque rorem, Neque meridiem, neque noctem, neque ante lucem, neque nitorem, neque claritatem, neque lucem, nisi solummodo spleudorem

41. aestum æstus altered to estū. gelu gaelus altered to gelu.
42. claritatem claritas altered to claritatem. neque lucem neque lux altered to neque lucem.

40. neque tonitr., neque corusc.] This is also the order in Ambrose (see extract A.). In the Syr. and Æth. verss. it is inverted.

sero] This form is probably due to the predominant adverbial use of such words; serum might be thought to range better with the nouns in the list, but though we have such phrases as quia serum erat diei, Liv. VII. 8, in serum dimicatione protracta, Suet. Aug. 17, and serum as an occasional variant for sero in the formula sero factum est, e.g. in Judith xiii. 1, Cod. Peeh. (Sab.), Mark iv. 35, Cod. Pal. (ed. Tischend.), comp. Mark xi. 19, xiv. 17, Cod. Bobbiens. (ed. Tisch., Wiener Jahrbücher der Lit. Vols. 121, 123), yet it would be difficult to find in the Latin of this period examples of serum used absolutely like its modern derivatives 'sera,' 'soir,' as an equivalent for vesper, the word which Ambrose substitutes in his paraphrase of this passage. Isidore of Sevilla (Saec. VII.) seems to bring us nearer to this use of the word, in the curious etymology which he proposes: serum uocatum a clausis seris, quando nox uenit, ut unusquisque somno tutior sit. Orig. Lib. v. 30, 17.

41. In attempting to explain the variations of the different versions in this long enumeration, we must make some allowance for the idiom of language, which groups words together according to a natural affinity. The two seasons which come first in order are thus represented by the three leading authorities: Lat. aestas, uer; Syr. aestas, hiems; Æth. hiems, aestas. Now, referring to Zach. xiv. 8 and Ps. lxxiii. 17 קיץ וחרף, LXX. θέρος καὶ ἔαρ, we find in the Old Lat. (Sab.), the Syr. (Pesh.), and the Æth. respectively, the same two seasons linked together as in the corresponding translations of this verse.

Again, the Syr. and Æth. verss. have three seasons, the Lat. two only, unless we suppose hiemem to be displaced. Comp. the paraphrase of Ambrose, neque aestas neque hiems uices uariabunt temporum, but this cannot be pressed. The present position of hiemem after aestum is probably due to its second signification 'storm' (χειμών). In some copies of the Æth. there is a similar combination, since after aestum (for which sudor is unfortunately given both in Laurence and Hilgenf.) follows procella according to the Berlin MS. (Prætorius) and the majority of the MSS. in the Brit. Mus. Similarly in the Arab. a word for 'storm' comes immediately after the seasons. For aestus (before autumnus) in the Lat. transl. from the Arab. we must read aestas.

Ewald explains للنافس as the pl. fract. of لنفس = λαμπάς. I may notice, however, that this word has been altered in the MS.; the base of the ل has been apparently retouched, the ن was originally ل, and ن has been erased before ف. The lucerna of Hilgenf. can scarcely be accepted as an adequate translation of the term; it would rather, I conceive, be illustrated by the λαμπάδες of Exod. xx. 18. But in the absence of any other example, the existence of such a word in Arab. must be regarded as doubtful.

42. ante lucem] The other verss. lead us to expect a noun here as above in v. 40, and it is not improbable that in the original text of the Lat. there stood the rare word antelucium. We have a trace of this form as a var. for anteluculo, Apul. Met. I. 14 (ed. Hildebr.); and examples of the ablative are found in Apul. Met. I. 11, and IX. 15. It is worth noticing in connexion with the reading of our MS. that in both these passages we find as a var. for antelucio the easier expression ante lucem. In 43 claritatis Altissimi, unde omnes incipiant uidere quae anteposita sunt. Spatium 44 enim habebit sicut ebdomada annorum. Hoc est iudicium meum et constitutio eius, 45 tibi autem soli ostendi haec. Et respondi tunc et dixi: domine, et nunc dico:

46 beati praesentes et obseruantes quae a te constituta sunt; Sed et [de] quibus erat oratio mea, quis enim est de praesentibus, qui non peccauit, uel quis natus, 47 qui non praeteriuit sponsionem tuam? Et nunc uideo, quoniam ad paucos per-48 tinebit futuram saeculi iocunditatem facere, multis autem tormenta. Increuit enim

43. ebdomada *ebdomada.
45. a te autem altered to a te; so also in chap. xiv. 21.
46. Sed et [de] quibus erat...praeteriuit sed et quib; his erat... prgteribit.
47. futuram futurã altered to futurã. autem enim.

Ecclus. xxiv. 44 we have anteluceanùm as a rendering of ὄρθρον.

43, 44. harum rerum (16), and horum omnium (17), should change places in the Lat. transl. from the Arab. (Hilgenf. p. 341).

44. et constitutio eius] Comp. haec est constitutio legis, Num. xix. 2, Cod. Ashburnh. In the Syr. ܗܘ ܕܝܢ ܘܢܡܘܣܗ ܗܢ ܐܝܟ hoc est autem et lex eius, Cer., for ܕܝܢ autem, read ܕܝܢܐ iudicium meum.

45. The Syr. suggests the transposition of the words tunc et, and is besides more flowing: Et respondi et dixi: Dominator Domine, etiam tunc dixi, et nunc iterum dicam; while in chap. ix. 15, olim locutus sum is not represented in the Syr.

praesentes et obs. gives the sense of the Arab. rather than Ockley's explan., that are found keeping.

46. Sed et [de] quibus erat oratio mea] It is difficult to decide between the various possible combinations of the Lat. words in our MS., but de quibus (or de his) seems to be the simplest emendation. Ewald's restoration: Doch meine frage an dich ist die, is based on the Æth.; while the Lat., the Arab. and also the Syr. (comp. ܐܠ ܕܥܐ vii. 102, 106 (36)), require the noun in the Gk. to be δέησις rather than ἐρώτησις. Perhaps an orig. of the form: ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ ὧν (or περὶ τούτων) ἡ δέησίς μου would best account for this divergence in translation, together with the difference in tense. The same sentiment reappears in chap. viii. 17. Comp. Rom. x. 1.

47. quoniam ad paucos pertinebit] From the Syr. vers. we may restore the original Greek thus: ὅτι ὀλίγοις μὲν μελλήσει ὁ αἰὼν ὁ ἐρχόμενος εὐφροσύνην ποιεῖν, πολλοῖς δὲ βασάνους. It is evident that the Latin translator read μελήσει pertinebit, for μελλήσει incipiet; the effects of this error extend to the end of the sentence. I have altered enim to autem; these particles are frequently interchanged in MSS., e.g. in chap. vii. 18 our MS. has autem, Cod. S. enim.

48. Increuit enim in nos cor malum] For this accus. after in comp. et in pectus meum increscebat sapientia, chap. xiv. 40, Cod. S. and Rönsch, p. 410.

et in itinera mortis] Instead of in, which is added above the line, the Syr. supplies monstrauit nobis; the Æth., however, has coupled this with the following clause, thus: et deduxit nos in uiam mortis et in uiam perditionis.

et hoc non paucos, sed pene omnes qui creati sunt] The Syr. has: ܘܗܕܐ ܠܐ ܠܥܕܐ ܠܟܠ ܐܢܫ ܕܐܬܒܪܝ ܐ ܠܐ ܠܟܠ ܫܒܥ in nos cor malum, quod nos abalienauit ab his, et deduxit nos in corruptionem, et in itinera mortis, ostendit nobis semitas perditionis et longe fecit nos a uita; et hoc 49 non paucos, sed peue omnes qui creati sunt. Et respondit ad me et dixit: audi 50 me et instruam te, et de sequenti corripiam te: Propter hoc non fecit Altissimus 51 unum saeculum, sed duo. Tu enim, quia dixisti non esse multos iustos, sed paucos, 52 impios uero multiplicari, audi ad haec: Lapides electos si habueris paucos ualde, 48. et in itinera & in*itinera.*

49. instruam in*struam.*
50. non fecit Altissimus non sufficit altissimus -mus altered to -mo.
52. paucos ualde, ad num. paucos: ualde ad num.

point) is strongly supported by a similar construction in the Syr. of Ecclus. xxx. 4, which has hitherto been obscured by a mistranslation. The verse stands thus in the Gk. and Syr. versions from the lost Hebr.: ἐτελεύτησεν αὐτοῦ ὁ πατήρ, καὶ ὡς οὐκ (καὶ οὐχ ὡς ℵ. καὶ οὐκ ὡς A.) ἀπέθανεν (ܐܘ ܥܒܕ ܚܕ ܒܢܐ ܕܠܐ Syr. Hex. ed. Cer.) ὅμοιον γὰρ αὐτῷ κατέλιπε μετ' αὐτόν.—ܗܘ ܕܫܒܩ ܐܚ ܒܬܪ ܡܝܬ ܕܠܐ ܒܢܐ. The Syr. is thus interpreted in the Par. and Lond. Polyglots: 'Defuncto ipsius patre, superest alter haud mortuus; quandoquidem similem sui post se reliquit.' The ܗܘ here (for so we are directed to write the word, in the recension of the text by Jacob of Edessa, Brit. Mus., MS. Rich. 7183 fol. 81 b. 1, l. 11) is evidently inaccurately represented by 'superest alter,' and the true sense of the clause might be correctly expressed in the words of the Old Lat.: et quasi non est mortuus. In fact ܩܪܝܒ (or ـܐ ܩܪܝܒ when a noun does not immediately succeed) = 'companion of,' 'allied to,' seems to pass into the meaning of 'well nigh,' 'as if,' 'one might almost say.' The use of חָבֵר in Prov. xxviii. 24 may be looked on as the germ of this formula. As, however, in the absence of other examples, the existence of such a particle must still be considered doubtful, I leave these few hints to be confirmed, or otherwise, by subsequent research.

49. instruam] For the earlier reading struam comp. de quibus structus es, Luke i. 4, Cod. Bezae, and the reff. to Tert. in Rönsch, p. 380; also ad instruendos (var. struendos) istinc nos, Cypr. Epist. XLIV. 1 (ed. Hartel). In chap. v. 32, where the same phrase occurs, instruam is without a variant.

et de sequenti corripiam te] Prob. from the Gk. καὶ ἐκ δευτέρου νουθετήσω σε. For de sequenti (Syr. ܡܢ ܬܪܝܢ), comp. denuo, de integro, de futuro, de praeterito, &c. Sequens = secundus vi. 7, 9, xi. 13.

50. non fecit Altissimus] I have ventured to substitute these words for the present reading of our MS., non sufficit Altissimo; for a reference to the original Altissimus involves a change of the verb (comp. hoc saeculum fecit Altissimus, chap. viii. 1), and by this emendation the Lat. is brought into conformity with all the other versions.

51. impios uero multiplicari] This clause is represented in the Arab., Arab.[2] (Cod. Vat.), and Arm., but not in the Syr. There is a lacuna in the Æth.

52. ad numerum eorum...abundat] The Lat. has been here interpolated; it should rather run thus: ad numerum eorum compones tibi plumbum et fictile. The words eos, autem and abundat distort the argument and find no place in any other version. The comparison implies that the number of the elect (to borrow the epithet used in the Lat.) cannot be increased by the addition of baser elements; this sense is best expressed by the Arab. The pron. eorum is not absent from any of the versions, although omitted in the Lat. translations of the Æth. and Arab. In the Æth. the latter part of v. 51 and the beginning of v. 52 have fallen out through homœotel. The problem of making a leaden vessel out of clay is a difficulty merely introduced in Laurence's transl.; the correct rendering, make for thyself a vessel of lead and clay, reflects the same original as 53 ad numerum eorum compones eos tibi, plumbum autem et fictile abundat. Et 54 dixi: domine, quomodo poterit? Et dixit ad me: non hoc solummodo, sed interroga 55 terram, et dicet tibi, adulare ei, et narrabit tibi, Dices ei: aurum creas et 56 argentum et aeramentum, et ferrum quoque et plumbum et fictile; Multiplicatur autem argentum super aurum, et aeramentum super argentum, et ferrum super 57 aeramentum, plumbum super ferrum, et fictile super plumbum. Aestima et tu, quae sint pretiosa et desiderabilia, quod multiplicatur aut quod rarum nascitur.

58 Et dixi: dominator domine, quod abundat uilius, quod enim rarius pretiosius est.
59 Et respondit ad me et dixit: In te †stant pondera quae cogitasti, quoniam qui habet
60 quod difficile est, gaudet super eum, qui habet abundantiam; Sic et a me repromissa

54. solummodo solummodum. 55. Dices ei: aurum creas dicens; enim & aurum creas
57. quae quae haec altered to haec quae.
58. enim enim enim. pretiosius praetiosior altered to pretiosius.
60. Sic et a me repromissa creatura sic & amare promissa creatura.

the other versions, but the verb συνθήσεις, taken in the meaning of 'construct,' required the insertion of an object before the materials.

54. adulare seems to import a needless intensity into a simple appeal; no stronger word than loquere is required by the other versions.

55. Comp. chap. viii. 2. By substituting dices for dicens, and ei for et, I have brought this Latin clause into harmony with the other versions. A strong argument that it originally followed the same construction may be derived from the reading creas (pr. m.), for the 2nd pers. sing. of a similar verb is found in all the other verss. In the sentence, as read by the principal translators, it looks as if the substance of the earth's reply were anticipated by the interrogator. The corrector of our MS. recognized this difficulty, and attempted to elicit an intelligible sense by reading: dicens; et aurum creatur... The answer would begin at multiplicatur according to Ewald: so wird sie dir erwidern, aber des silbers ist mehr als gold... In the Arm. also and Arab. a new speaker is here introduced.

59. There is a startling error in the MS. reading of this passage: in te stant pondera. An explanation that readily occurs is, that stant is a corruption from statera (in Eccles. xxi. 25 ἐν ζυγῷ σταθήσονται = statera ponderabuntur). It may be urged that the noun is here superfluous and not expressed in the other versions, but this difficulty will be removed by supposing the original to have been, as Mr. Hort suggests, ζυγοστάτησον, which might be rendered either by one word or by two, and which is used in this metaphorical sense by Lucian, De Hist. Conscrib. c. 49: καὶ ζυγοστατείτω τότε ὥσπερ ἐν τρυτάνῃ τὰ γιγνόμενα; and by Eulog. ap. Phot. Bibl. p. 272. 35 (ed. Bekker): τὰ δὲ ῥήματα τῇ διανοίᾳ ζυγοστατεῖν.

It may be worth while to mention another attempt to account for the presence of stant. In the Syr. the clause stands thus: ܒܟ ܩܛܠ ܩܫܘ ܕܡܬܩܠ. The same phrase is found in chap. iv. 31, where the Lat. is: aestima autem (=δή, Hilgenf.) apud te. Now the Tironian sign for autem, ⁊, which was probably not very familiar to our scribe (I have noted only two instances of it in this book), might have been here read as ſt. Whichever be the solution, it is clear that the termination -ant originated from a copyist (possibly influenced by chap. xiv. 14) mistaking the imperat. pondera for a plur. noun.

The corresponding clause in Ewald's 'Wiederherstellung des Buches,' es ziemt dir wohl so zu denken, seems to have been derived solely from Laurence's transl. of the Æth. Te ipso id dignum sit, quod cogitasti (retained in Hilgenf.). This version, however, if correctly rendered, would conform to the Syr., and to the orig. Lat. vers. See Dillm. Lex. s. voc. I. G.

60. Sic et a me repromissa creatura] I have creatura, iocundabor enim super paucis et qui saluabuntur, propterea quod ipsi sunt qui gloriam meam nunc dominatiorem fecerunt, et per quos nunc nomen meum 61 nominatum est; Et non contristabor super multitudinem eorum qui perierunt, ipsi enim sunt qui uapori assimilati sunt et flammae, fumo adaequati sunt et exarserunt, 62 feruerunt et extincti sunt. Et respondi et dixi: O tu terra, quid peperisti, si sensus 63 factus est de puluere, sicut et cetera creatura! Melius enim erat ipsum puluerem 64 non esse natum, ut non sensus inde fieret. Nunc autem nobiscum crescit sensus, 65 et propter hoc torquemur, quoniam scientes perimus. Lugeat hominum genus, et

60. dominatiorem dominationem.
61. uapori apparently uano altered to uapori. fumo adsimilatae fumo.
feruerunt feruerunt altered to ferbuerunt.
64. sensus sensum altered to sensus.

thus attempted to emend the sic et amare promissa creatura of our MS., but the sense is still unsatisfactory, and a comparison with the other versions shews that this is another instance of the confusion between κτίσις and κρίσις in the Greek of our book. Comp. Hilgenf. pp. XL. XLI. A still earlier form of the Lat., to judge from the Syr. and Æth., was repromissio creaturae, the original being probably οὕτως καὶ ἡ παρ' ἐμοῦ ἐπαγγελία τῆς κρίσεως (var. lect. κτίσεως).

qui gloriam meam nunc dominatiorem fecerunt] The Syr. and Arab.^{2} = qui nunc gloriam meam confirmant. The Æth. = quoniam illi assequentur gloriam meam. The Gk. οἱ...κυροῦντες would explain both these renderings, but the verb κυρεῖν seems too remote from the Gk. vocabulary of the Æth. translator. It might be urged in favour of the retention of the MS. reading dominationem, that the phrase in the original was possibly κυρίαν ποιεῖν, and that our translator took the former word for κυρείαν; but the construction of the clause requires us, I think, by the change of a single letter, to read dominatiorem, a word used as equivalent to κυριώτερος in the old Lat. translation of Irenaeus, e.g., II. 5. 4 (ed. Stieren), alioquin necessitatem maiorem et dominatiorem facient quam Deum. The corruption in the MS. is well illustrated by a passage in Tert. adv. Marc. I. XXVIII. (ed. Oehler): Credo, sulphuratiorem eis gehennam praeparabit, where the analogous form sulphuratiorem has for a variant the abstract sulphurationem. And so also timoratior, which is Volkmar's acute emendation for the common reading timor acrior in 4 Ezra xii. 13, appears in our MS. as timoratio.

61. The Arab. has صاروا مستوجبين للنار 'have proved worthy of,' 'are condemned to the fire;' Ockley, are bound to hell. Fabricius, unskilled in Engl. idiom (by an obvious association he translates craftiness by vires in verse 92), has rendered this ligati ad infernum (retained in Hilgenf.).

62. O tu terra, quid peperisti] The Syr. gives this in an expanded form: O quid fecisti, terra, quia isti nati sunt e te et ambulant in perditionem, comp. chap. x. 10. The Arm. sums up this and the two following verses in a similar expression: O terra, quare genuisti hominem? nam cruciatibus aeternitatis traditus est.

63. In this verse the Latin gives no countenance to Le Hir's interpretation of the Syr. (see Monum. sacra et prof. ed. Ceriani, vol. v. p. 110); the word ܕܝ however, to which he gives the inadmissible translation iudicium, is certainly out of place; omitting this, and a superfluous ܕ in ܠܐ ܕܥܒܕ, we might restore the original thus: κρεῖσσον γὰρ (−γὰρ Syr.) ἦν εἰ οὐκ ἐγεννήθη (+καὶ Syr.) αὐτὸς ὁ χοῦς ἵνα μὴ γένηται ὁ νοῦς ἐκεῖθεν. But we cannot expect perfect conformity between the Lat. and the Syr., as the addition of an extra clause to verse 62 in the latter has disturbed the balance of the sentence.

agrestes bestiae laetentur, lugeant omnes qui nati sunt, quadripedia uero et pecora 66 iocundentur. Multum enim melius est illis quam nobis, non enim sperant iudicium, 67 nec enim sciunt cruciamenta nec salutem post mortem repromissam sibi. Nobis autem 68 quid prodest, quoniam saluati saluabimur, si tormento tormentabimur? Omnes enim qui nati sunt, commixti sunt iniquitatibus, et pleni sunt peccatis, et grauati delictis; 69 Et si non essemus post mortem in iudicio uenientes, melius fortassis nobis uenisset.
70 Et respondit ad me et dixit: et quando Altissimus faciens faciebat saeculum, Adam et omnes qui cum eo uenerunt, primum praeparauit iudicium et quae sunt iudicii.
71 Et nunc de sermonibus tuis intellege, quoniam dixisti, quia nobiscum crescit sensus;

65. omnes omnes altered to homines.
67. quoniam qnm altered to quod. si sed altered to si.
69. in iudicio uenientes in iudicio uenientis.
71. intellege...crescit sensus; Qui intellege [vel sensum]. ...creseit, qui...

66. Multum enim melius] In like manner our MS. has multum (for multo) plus uae his, chap. xiii. 16. This use of 'multum' with a comparative, not unknown in classical authors, as Plaut. Most. III. 2. 137, Cic. Off. III. 13 (55) (in some MSS.), Stat. Theb. IX. 559, Sil. Ital. XIII. 708, Juv. X. 197, Quintil. Instit. X. 1. 94, is of rare occurrence in biblical MSS. According to Vercellone, some authorities have multum as a variant in Ruth iv. 15, et multo tibi melior est. The same construction in Gk. is more familiar from Homer downwards; comp. also 4 Macc. i. 8, ii. 6, 2 Cor. viii. 22, 1 Pet. i. 7 (text. rec.), and πολὺ (text. rec., πολλῷ) μᾶλλον Heb. xii. 9, 25. This should not be confounded with πολὺ μᾶλλον ἢ in Num. xiv. 12, Deut. ix. 14, which is an attempt to represent the Hebr. idiom for the comparative of the adj. See Is. liv. 1, LXX.

In Arab.[2] we must read with the MS. لقلّة اكثرائهم (not اكرائهم).

The other versions have no particle corresponding to the third enim in this verse.

68. commixti sunt iniquitatibus] Perhaps συμπεφυρμένοι εἰσὶν ἀνομίαις; at least there is a strong probability that some form of φύρεσθαι stood in the original of this clause, for the ܡܬܚܠܛܝܢ of the Syr. (comp. the Syro-Hex. of Is. xiv. 19, Lam. iv. 14 Sym., Ezek. xvi. 6, 22, Job vii. 5, xxx. 14, xxxix. 30, Jer. iii. 2), and the معجونين (= πεφυραμένοι) of the Arab., both point in this direction. The Gk. word in this context may be illustrated by συμφυρόμενον ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις αὐτοῦ, Ecclus. xii. 14; συμφυρμοὺς πονηρίας, Herm. Past. Vis. II. 2; καὶ ταῖς πραγματείαις σου συνανεφύρης ταῖς πονηραῖς, id. Vis. II. 3; and συμφύρεσθαι τῷ τῆς πονηρίας αὐτῶν βορβόρῳ, Eus. Hist. Eccles. VII. 7. 2. For the Syr. comp. ܡܠܝ ܕܚܛܝܢ ܡܬܚܠܛܝܢ ܒܚܛܗ ܘܒܥܘܠ ܣܓܝ, Apocal. Bar. 21.

grauati delictis] In the transl. from the Syr. vers. ܡܬܚܠܛܝܢ (pl. of ܡܬܚܠܛܐ, chap. iii. 1, see Amira, Gram. Syr. p. 92) should not be rendered ruinae, which is its proper meaning in Apocal. Bar. 35, but delicta, both here and in chap. vii. 23. The Syr. word is equivalent not only to πτῶσις, Is. xvii. 1, li. 17 (Hex.), and to πτῶμα, Job xv. 23, xvi. 14 (Hex.), but also to παράπτωμα, Job xxxv. 15 (Hex.), Sap. iii. 13, x. 1 (Pesh.).

69. in iudicio uenientes] Instead of in iudicium uen. See Rönsch, p. 406. The MS. has uenientis here, and inspirationis (pr. m.) v. 80; other instances of this old spelling of the plur. are given above, p. 13.

uenisset, in the sense of euenisset; it is possible, however, that the first three letters are merely echoed from the previous clause, and that the true reading is fuisset, which satisfies the other versions.

70. cum eo] According to the Syr., Eth., and Arab., ex eo. Comp. ex eo, iii. 21, vi. 54, vii. 118 (48), A. and S.

71. sensus is omitted in the MS. after creseit, and the corrector in perplexity has inserted vel sensum after intellege.

72 Qui ergo commorantes sunt in terra, hinc cruciabuntur, quoniam sensum habentes iniquitatem fecerunt, et mandata accipientes non seruauerunt ea, et legem consequuti 73 fraudauerunt eam quam acceperunt. Et quid habebunt dicere in iudicio, uel quo-
74 modo respondebunt in nouissimis temporibus? Quantum enim tempus ex quo longanimitatem habuit Altissimus his qui inhabitant saeculum, et non propter eos, 75 sed propter ea quae prouidit tempora! Et respondi et dixi: si inueni gratiam coram te, domine, demonstra, domine, seruo tuo, si post mortem uel nunc quando reddimus unusquisque animam suam, si conseruati conseruabimur in requie, donec
76 ueniant tempora illa, in quibus incipies creaturam renouare, aut amodo cruciamur. Et respondit ad me et dixit: ostendam tibi et hoc; tu autem noli commisceri cum eis
77 qui spreuerunt, neque connumeres te cum his qui cruciantur. Etenim est tibi thesaurus operum repositus apud Altissimum, sed non tibi demonstrabitur usque in nouissimis
78 temporibus. Nam de morte sermo est: quando profectus fuerit terminus sententiae ab Altissimo ut homo moriatur, recedente inspiratione de corpore ut dimittatur iterum 79 ad eum qui dedit adorare gloriam Altissimi primum. Et si quidem esset eorum qui spreuerunt et non seruauerunt uiam Altissimi, et eorum qui contempserunt legem

75. demonstra, domine, demonstra dne. reddimus reddemus altered to reddimus. in requie in requie (final e over an eras.).
78. est ē added above the line.
79. spreuerunt inspirauerunt.

72. et legem consequuti fraudauerunt eam] This reading is probably correct; comp. nec enim uidetur uoluisse fraudare edictum, Digest. 29, II. 42; fraudandae legis gratia, id. 35, I. 64; though the Syr. ܠܡܚܕ pointing to ἠθέτησαν rather suggests frustrauerunt. Comp. Ps. cxxxi. 11, LXX., Vulg., and Syro-Hex., and the use of frustrari in a similar context, Iren. IV. 9. 3, 12. 1 (ed. Stieren), Tert. Apol. v.

In the Arab. we must translate thus: 'have set up for themselves an opposite law,' and not with Ockley (and Hilgenf.), have set up their pleasures as an opposite law; for the word in question should be read لِذَاتِهِم and not لَذَّاتِهِم.

75. ...domine, demonstra, domine, seruo tuo] The domine which is placed in direct antithesis to seruo tuo is struck out as superfluous in the MS.; yet it probably represents a Gk. word, for where the former domine stands, the orig. according to the Syr. would be δέσποτα κύριε, but there are signs of variations in the Gk. text, for these words have no equivalent in the Æth. and Arab., while the Lat. translator seems to have divided them between the two clauses. The formula is correctly rendered dominator domine in a similar context, chap. vi. 11, xii. 7, 8.

78. The Syr. supplies hic before sermo.

terminus] Comp. terminum Dei, x. 16, and Tert. de pud. XIII.

recedente inspir... dedit] Comp. Eccles. xii. 7.

adorare] According to the Syr., Æth., and Arab. adorat, which no doubt represents the original. The Lat. transl. may have read προσκυνεῖν for προσκυνεῖ.

79. spreuerunt] The MS. has inspirauerunt, which is unintelligible, and can only be a mechanical repetition from verse 78. Both the Syr. and Æth.

80 eius, et eorum qui oderunt eos qui timent eum, Haec inspirationes in habitationes non 81 ingredientur, sed uagantes erunt amodo in cruciamentis, dolentes semper et tristes.
82 Uia prima, quia spreuerunt legem Altissimi. Secunda uia, quoniam non possunt re-83 uersionem bonam facere ut uiuant. Tertia uia, uident repositam mercedem his qui 84 testamentis Altissimi crediderunt. Quarta uia, considerabunt sibi in nouissimis repo-85 situm cruciamentum. Quinta uia, uidentes aliorum habitaculum ab angelis conseruari 86 cum silentio magno. Sexta uia, uidentes quemadmodum de eis pertransient in cru-

80. haec haec altered to hac. inspirationes inspirationis altered to -nes.
84. considerabunt considerabant altered to considerabunt.
86. pertransient in pertransientem altered to pertransiens.

refer us to ἀθετεῖν, of which a common equivalent is sperno. I have therefore substituted spreuerunt.

80. Haec inspirationes] Haec is the original reading of the MS. both here and in chap. xiii. 40, as also of Cod. S. in chap. xii. 35, xiii. 25, 40. This form of the nom. pl. fem. occurs in Lev. xxvi. 45, Num. iii. 20, 21, 27, 33, iv. 31, xxvi. 7, 22, 25, 27, (hac*) xxx. 17, xxxi. 16, xxxvi. 12, Cod. Ashburnh.; in Num. iii. 1, Cod. A. (=Amiat.) and S. (Vercellone, Variae Lect. Vulg. Lat. Bibl. ed.); in Jos. xix. 51, Cod. Amiat.; in Esth. x. 11, Cod. Pech. (Sabat.); in Job xviii. 21, Cod. Maj. Mon. (id.); and so haec should be explained in Ezek. xlvii. 12, quoniam aquae eorum de sanctis haec procedunt, Fragm. Weingart. (A. Vogel, Beiträge zur Herstellung der alt. lat. Bibel-Uebers. Wien, 1868). Comp. also Apul. Metam. iv. 2, Hildebrand's note, Luer. vi. 456, Munro's note, and Ribbeck's Prolegom. crit. ad P. Verg. Mar. opp. maj., Index Gram.

The recedente inspiratione of ver. 78 smoothes the way to the use of inspirationes in the sense of disembodied souls. For the controversies which originated from identifying inspiratio with anima, comp. Diod. on Gen. ii. 7: ὑπέλαβον ἔνιοι κακῶς, τὸ ἐμφύσημα τοῦ θεοῦ γεγενῆσθαι ψυχὴν τὴν ἀθάνατον, κ.τ.λ. (Catena in octat. et libr. Reg. Lips. 1772), and Philastrius de haeres. chap. 98: Alia est haeresis, quae dicit inspirationem animam esse, non inspirationem (v.l. -ne) in animam datam fuisse .. Further references may be found in the note of Fabricius on the passage last quoted.

sed uagantes erunt] Since the Arab. as rendered by Ockley, bound up with (Hilgenf. ligabitur cum), has been used by Volkmar to construct a highly improbable theory with regard to the verb in the original, it may be noticed that this version has simply محسوبة مع 'numbered (or, reckoned) with.' —Read with the MS. لـ العابدين for لـ العايدين in Arab.[2] tristes] We miss per septem uias after this word. Comp. verse 91. It is represented in all the other versions.

83. testamentis Altissimi] The words בהסכם ובחוקי (comp. chap. iii. 32, v. 29) are absent from the Syr. Corresponding words are found in the Æth. and Arab.

84. The Syr. alone makes an addition at the end of this verse, which is thus rendered by Ceriani: in quo corripientur animae impiorum; quia cum haberent tempus operationis, non subiecerent se praeceptis Altissimi.

84, 85. Hippolytus (ἐκ τοῦ πρὸς Ἕλληνας λόγου τοῦ ἐπιγεγραμμένου κατὰ Πλάτωνος περὶ τῆς τοῦ παντὸς αἰτίας) has worked out these ideas in detail: οἱ ἔγγιον ὄντες τοῦ μὲν βρασμοῦ ἀδιαλείπτως ἐπακούουσι καὶ τοῦ τῆς θέρμης ἀτμοῦ οὐκ ἀμοιραῦσιν, αὐτῆς δὲ τῆς ἐγγίονος ὄψεως τὴν φοβερὰν καὶ ὑπερβαλλόντως ξανθὴν θέαν τοῦ πυρὸς ὁρῶντες καταπεπήγασι, τῇ προσδοκίᾳ τῆς μελλούσης κρίσεως ἤδη δυνάμει κολαζόμενοι, ἀλλὰ καὶ οὗτοι τὸν τῶν πατέρων χορὸν (var. lect. χῶρον) καὶ τοὺς δικαίους ὁρῶσι, καὶ ἐπ' αὐτῷ τούτῳ κολαζόμενοι. (Ed. de Lagarde, p. 69.)

86. quemadmodum de eis pertransient in cruciamentum] There is great diversity in the transla-

87 ciamentum. Septima uia est omnium quae supradictae sunt uiarum maior, quoniam detabescent in confusione et consumentur in hon(rr)oribus† et marcescent in timoribus, uidentes gloriam Altissimi coram quem uiuentes peccauerunt et coram tions of this passage; in the Syr. (quia uident, quod amodo eis praeparatum est, cruciamentum) it is little more than a repetition of verse 84, but just as the via V^ta^ adds to the via III^tia^ the part borne by the angels, so we might expect in the via VI^ta^ a corresponding addition to the via IV^ta^, and this idea is expressed by the use of the causative form of the verb in the Æth. quod cogunt [sc. Angeli] eos circumire et uidere, quod amodo eis continget, cruciamentum. Now the main difference between the Lat. and the Æth. may be accounted for by supposing them to have been derived from the Gk. ἀπ' αὐτῶν διακομισθήσανται εἰς τὸν βασανισμόν, the verb having been taken as mid. (comp. διακομισθείς, διελθών, Hesych. and Suid.), in the one case, but more correctly as pass., in the other; the same compound is used by Plato in a similar context: τίσεις δὲ αὐτῶν τὴν πρασήκουσαν τιμωρίαν εἴτ' ἐνθάδε μένων εἴτε καὶ ἐν Ἅιδου διαπορευθεὶς εἴτε καὶ τούτων εἰς ἀγριώτερον ἔτι διακομισθεὶς τόπον. De Legibus, lib. x. p. 905.

87. uia cruciamtum uia. in confusione in confusionem. consumentur consumuntur altered to consumentur. hon(rr)oribus honoribus altered to horroribus. coram quem coram quem altered to coram quo. uiuentes uidentes.

The twofold office thus assigned to the Angels in ver. 85, 86 is set forth at length by Hippolytus in the work quoted above (ed. de Lagarde pp. 68, 69): Τοῦτα τὰ χωρίαν (sc. Ἅιδης) ὡς φραύριον ἀπενεμήθη ψυχαῖς, ἐφ' ᾧ κατεστάθησαν ἄγγελοι φρουροί, πρὸς τὰς ἑκάστων πράξεις διανέμοντες τὰς τῶν τόπων προσκαίρους κολάσεις....μία γὰρ εἰς τοῦτα τὸ χωρίαν κάθοδος, αὖ τῇ πύλῃ ἐφεστῶτα ἀρχάγγελον ἅμα στρατιᾷ πεπιστεύκαμεν, ἣν πύλην διελθόντες οἱ καταγόμενοι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐπὶ τὰς ψυχὰς τεταγμένων ἀγγέλων οὐ μιᾷ ὁδῷ πορεύονται, ἀλλ' αἱ μὲν δίκαιοι εἰς δεξιὰ φωταγωγούμεναι καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν ἐφεστώτων κατὰ τάπον ἀγγέλων ὑμναύμενοι, ἄγονται εἰς χωρίαν φωτεινάν,.. οἱ δὲ ἄδικοι εἰς ἀριστερὰ ἕλκονται ὑπὸ ἀγγέλων καλαστῶν, οὐκέτι ἑκουσίως πορευόμενοι, ἀλλὰ μετὰ βίας ὡς δέσμιοι ἑλκόμενοι, οἷς οἱ ἐφεστῶτες ἄγγελοι ἐπιγελῶντες διαπέμπανται, ἐπονειδίζοντες καὶ φοβερῷ ὄμματι ἐπαπειλοῦντες εἰς τὰ κατώτερα ὠθοῦντες, οὓς ἀγομένους ἕλκουσιν αἱ ἐφεστῶτες ἕως πλησίαν τῆς γεέννης (quoted in part by Hilgenf.). —I have introduced into this verse but one simple emendation, pertransient in for pertransientem, but it is not unreasonable to suppose that instead of quemadmodum there stood originally q̄n̄m (=quoniam) amodo, inasmuch as an equivalent to amodo (ἀπ' ἄρτι) is found, though in a slightly different position, both in the Æth. and Syr. versions.

pertransient] Numerous examples of this form of the fut. in compounds of eo are collected by Rönsch, pp. 292, 293; we meet with both transibunt and transient in the same verse, Luke xxi. 33, Codd. Amiat. Forojul. (Blanchini, Evang. quadr.), Rehd. (ed. Haase), Lindisfarne and Rushworth Gospels, and also Cod. CCLXXXVI. Corp. X^ti^ Coll. Cambr., according to the correction, but the latter verb was in this case orig. transibunt; in Cod. Vindob. (Paulus, Memorabilien 7^tes^ Stück) the two forms occur in inverted order. The following instances have been noticed in 4 Ezra (including the extraneous chapters), transient ones Cod. S., xvi. 33; transiet, xvi. 78 (e corr.) Cod. A.; exiet, xvi. 9; exient, xv. 29, 30; interiet, ii. 26 Cod. S.; interient, xv. 57, xvi. 23 Cod. S.; interient (disperient Cod. A.), xvi. 18; perient, vii. 20 Cod A., ix. 15 Cod. A. (e corr.), xii. 20.

The Bodl. MS. of Arab.[2] has here الجارى, also ثواب in v. 83, both agreeing with Steiner's conj. For the former the Vat. MS. has الجاى.

87. detabescent] This rare compound occurs in Lev. xxvi. 39, Cod. Ashburnh. One authority for the perfect is introduced in the last ed. of Forcellini, detabuerunt, Ruf. vert. Orig. Hom. 2 in Ps. xxxviii. The editor (De-Vit) however, according to his practice in citing the other compounds of this root, refers it to a non-existent pres. detabeo. For verbs compounded with de- in vulgar Latin, see Rönsch, pp. 188, 88 quem incipient in novissimis temporibus iudicari. Nam eorum qui uias seruaue-

87. coram quem coram quo -uo written over an eras.

205, and Wölfflin, Bemerkungen über das Vulgärlatein, Philologus Bd. 34, pp. 161, 162. With the orig. reading detab. in confusionem comp. et consumerentur in confusionem, Jer. xx. 18, Cod. Amiat. The corresponding verb in the Arab. ينسبلوا has been rendered shall be overwhelmed, Ockley (superfundentur, Fabr.), superabuntur in Hilgenf. But the word is evidently connected in meaning with the detabescent of the Lat. version. Comp. the cogn. root שׁבל, and שׁבלול Ps. lviii. 9. Castell (Lex. Heptagl.) gives 'سبل iv. mananit . . . vii effusus, protensus fuit. BB.' (the reference is to Bar Bahlul sub voc. ܚܪܒܬܐ. خرقة كبيرة تجعل على [الراس] وتنسبل على الكتفين Cod. Cantabr.).

Arab.[2] has here لايتم يدانون فى البيتان dieweil sie in der Schande gerichtet werden. Steiner. For the second word I would read يذابون 'shall be made to pine away.' This slight alteration brings the above compendium into harmony with all the other versions.

in honoribus[rr]†] It is not easy to explain satisfactorily the origin of the MS. reading honoribus (pr. m.), horroribus (c corr.). The plur. of horror is not in the Vulg., but we find in the Old Lat. horrorum (Gk. φόβου), Job xxxiii. 16, Cod. Maj. Mon. (Sabat.). By the correction this clause is drawn into parallelism with the following, but both the Syr. and Æth. versions lead us to expect in pudore, synonymous with the preceding in confusione. Ambrose also in his reference to this passage has et pudorem et confusionem. So that the Gk. had most likely the words αἰσχύνη...ἐντροπή, which are found together in the LXX, Ps. xxxiv. 26, xliii. 16, lxviii. 20, cviii. 29, also Isai. lxi. 7, Theod.; the corresponding verbs occur more frequently in parallelism. The Armenian is thus rendered by Petermann: qua macerantur et consumuntur pudore et ignominia et circumdatae sunt intellectu et timore. It may be mentioned here that the order is different in the Arm. version, the above vii uiae being placed after the vii uiae animarum iustorum.

coram quem...et coram quem] Our MS. has in the first case, quem pr. man., and in the second, quo with the last two letters written over an erasure. I conclude, therefore, that quem was the original reading in both places. In like manner, coram nos is written, but nos is altered to nobis iv. 14, Codd. A. and S. Comp. also vi. 36, ix. 28, Cod. S. Rönsch (p. 409) quotes only one example of 'coram' with the accus., viz. 1 Thess. iii. 9, Cod. Clarom. To this may be added, Lev. xxvi. 7, Num. viii. 22, xix. 3, xx. 27, xxv. 6, Cod. Ashburnh.; Acts iv. 10, viii. 32, xix. 9, Cod. Laud. (ed. Tisch.); Dent. iv. 8, 1 Reg. xii. 2, Old Lat. Speculum (Mai, Nov. Patr. Bibl. i. 2, pp. 60, 114); Jer. xv. 9, Par. Palimps. Wirceburg. (ed. Ranke); Acts vi. 8, Cod. Par. Lat. 6400 G. (Old Lat. palimp. fragments at Paris, A. A. Vansittart, Journ. of Philol. ii. p. 244); 1 Kings xi. 19, Cod. Reg. Succ. 1462 (Blanchini, Vind. Can. cccxli.); Juvencus, Sel. Fragm. xxvi. (Pitra, Spicil. Solesm. vol. i. p. 248.)

For uiuentes the MS. has uidentes here, and again in verse 94: on the other hand, in uidentes, chap. i. 37, and uidisti, chap. ii. 48, the 'd' is the result of a correction, having been originally written as 'u'.

88. Nam eorum qui ... (89) commoratae] So also in the Syr. MS. the masc. pl. ܕܢܛܪܝܢ is followed by the fem. pl. ܕܬܫܒܘܩ. Possibly the first clause in the original was so constructed that the gender of the subject would not be immediately apparent, as, for instance, τῶν γὰρ τὰς τοῦ ὑψίστου ὁδοὺς φυλοξαμένων. But from the nature of the case, we find in the Lat. as in the other versions great fluctuation of gender pervading the succeeding verses, and I have not attempted to introduce uniformity.

uaso also occurs vi. 56 Cod. S. For examples of uasus and uasum, see Rönsch, p. 260 (the ref. to Lucr. vi. 233 should have been given on the authority of Marc. Capella, as uasis, not uasi, appears to be the reading of the MSS). Add uasi, Lev. xiii. 59 Cod.

runt Altissimi ordo est hic, quando incipient seruari a uaso corruptibili. In eo tempore commoratae seruierunt cum labore Altissimo, et omni hora sustinuerunt periculum, uti perfecte custodirent legislatoris legem. Propter quod hic de his sermo: Imprimis uident cum exultatione multa gloriam eius qui suscipit eas, requiescent enim per septem ordines. Ordo primus, quoniam cum labore multo certati sunt, ut uincerent cum eis plasmatum cogitamentum malum, ut non eas seducat a uita in mortem. Secundus ordo, quoniam uident complicationem, in qua

88. incipient incipiet altered to incipient. uaso uaso altered to uase.
89. sustinuerunt sustenuerunt altered to sustinuerunt. uti uti altered to ut.
91. multa multā.
92, 93. in mortem. Secundus . . . Item secundus . . .
93. complicationem complecationem altered to complicationem. qua quo.

Ashburnh., Eccles. xxxviii. 30 Cod. Amiat.; uaso, Lev. vi. 28, xi. 34, xiii. 49, 52, 53, 57, Num. xix. 17, xxxv. 18 Cod. Ashburnh., Lev. xi. 34 Palimps. Wirceb. (ed. Ranke), 1 Pet. iii. 5 Old Lat. Spec. (Mai, Nov. Patr. Bibl. i. 2, p. 80), 1 Pet. iii. 7 Old Lat. Spec., Codd. Amiat. Tolet. Fuld., but uasu ib. Cod. Harl. 1772 (Griesbach, Symb. Crit. i. p. 369); in uasum fictile, Num. v. 17 Cod. Ashburnh.

89. In eo tempore commoratae] According to the Syr.: In illo enim tempore quo commoratae sunt in eo. Similarly the Æth.

cum labore] So the Syr. and Æth. In the Arab. this gives place to the usual phrase in timore (om. eius in Hilgenf.).

91. I have altered multā to multa on the authority of the Syr. and Æth. versions.

ordines] The versions are equally divided with regard to this word. From the Lat., Æth., and Arab., we might infer that τάξεις was used for the series that follows, while the Syr., Arab.[2] and Arm. require the same word as that used in the former series, viz. ὁδοί. Comp. especially the three leading versions in verse 99, where the two series are mentioned together; the Syr. is consistent in obliterating the distinction between the words, the Æth., as well as the Lat., in maintaining it.

92. certati sunt] For the deponent verbs, 'certor,' 'concertor,' 'supercertor,' see Rönsch, pp. 302, 303. A few more instances may be added: certantur, Gen. xlix. 6, Ital. Fragm. ex Cod. Σ (Verc. Var. Lect. i. p. 183); certari, Judg. iii. 2, Cod. Amiat.; certabatur, 2 Sam. xix. 9, Cod. B. [=Tolet.] and also Codd. D. F. U. (Verc. Var. Lect.); concertatur, Cypr. App. de Spect. 3 (ed. Hartel).

In the Arab. بطغيان is rightly rendered by Ockley, through the deceitfulness of, and Steiner's correction impietate is uncalled for; see the verb in verse 48 (Ew. 45); comp. also Job xix. 4, Transl. Ant. Arab. (ed. Com. de Baudissin), and especially Cast. Lex. s. v. For ut eos deflecteret, in the translation of the Arab., read ut declinarent.

In justification of my departure from the MS. reading, a uita. Item secundus, I may remark that a comparison of the other verses in this and the former series shews that Item is an intruder before the ordinal, while the consent of the Syr., Æth. and Arab. versions goes far to prove that it is corrupted from ī mortem, which is to be appended to the preceding sentence.

93. quoniam uident] Instead of يرون, the MS. of Arab.[2] has ليرون; comp. the beginning of the neighbouring verses.

et quae in eis manet punitio] We can scarcely doubt, if we regard the context together with the Syr. and Æth. versions, that the Gr. text would be more correctly represented by et quae eis (or eas) manet punitio; this, I believe, was the original form of the Latin, the preposition having crept in by the force of association. A like faulty reading meets us in the Old Lat. vers. of Job xx. 26, Et omnes tenebrae in eo maneant, Cod. Maj. Mon. (Sabat.), from the Gk. πᾶν δὲ σκότος αὐτῷ ὑπομείναι. Comp. also Ps. xxxii. 20, Anima nostra patiens est

94 uagantur impiorum animae, et quae in eis manet punitio. Tertius ordo, uidentes testimonium quod testificatus est eis qui plasmauit eas, quoniam uiuentes seruа-in Domino, Cod. Sangerm., where other MSS. omit in (Sabat.), the Gk. being ἡ ψυχὴ ἡμῶν ὑπομένει τῷ Κυρίῳ. The construction of 'manet' with the accus. and also with the dat., being rare in biblical Latin, would be especially liable to give way to a more familiar use of the word. A few examples of each may be quoted, not inappropriate to the matter in hand: (a) for the accus., Acts xx. 23, Vulg.; Lactant. Instit. Epit. cap. LVII., et illos aeternum poenam manere...(see Bünemann's note). (b) for the dat., Acts xx. 23, Cod. Bezae, μενουσιν μοι, manen mi (sic), and the following passages, both from the translation of Rufinus, et illis sciunt in iudicio grauiora manere supplicia, Clem. Recogn. II. 13; Immortales tibi crede manere in iudicio et honores et poenas, Sexti Sententiae, No. 14 (ed. Gildemeister). Comp. also the note on verse 95.

94. quod quo[a]. uiuentes uidentes.

94. quoniam uiuentes seruauerunt quae per fidem data est lex] The original of this sentence, owing to the varying shades of meaning in πίστις, has received different interpretations, which may be conveniently arranged in two classes according to the construction of the word in question:

(1) where it is connected with the 'giving of the law,' as in the Lat., and in the Syr. also, where the two words have become blended in the verb ܕܐܡܢܘ, '(the law) which was entrusted to them,' or, 'with which they were entrusted.'

(2) where it is connected with 'the keeping of the law,' as seems to be the case in the Arm., from Petermann's transl.: quod magna fide seruauit, quae datae ei sunt, leges. In the Arab. also it is mixed up with this clause. To the same class we might refer the Æth., as exhibited in Laurence's transl.: quod seruauerunt fideliter in uita sua legem, quae iis data est. But when literally rendered it will run thus: q. s. in u. s. legem quae in fide quae iis data est. If the former of the relative pronouns be omitted as superfluous, this version would range with class (2), if the latter, with class (1). Neither Dillmann nor Praetorius supplies variants, but on referring to the MSS. of the Brit. Mus., I find that one only (Or. 490) supports the double relative of the printed text, while all the others (Add. 16,188, Or. 484, Or. 489, Or. 492, Or. 502, Or. 503, Or. 504, Or. 506) omit it in the second place, and thus give their authority in favour of ranking this version with class (1). We may pass over the Arab. compendium and the paraphrase of Ambrose, for 'πίστις' disappears in the brevity of the one, and in the diffuseness of the other. It will, perhaps, satisfy all the requirements of the case, if we assume that the words ἐν πίστει were so placed in the sentence, that they could be joined grammatically, either with the subordinate, or with the principal verb, as in the two classes just described. Although the Lat. and the Syr. versions both belong to the former class, yet in the one the words in question were taken to denote the state of mind in which, or the means whereby, the law was received, per fidem, while in the other they seem to have been understood in the sense of 'in trust,' 'as a charge,'—'they kept the law which was given them in trust;' comp. Rom. iii. 2; 1 Tim. vi. 20; 2 Tim. i. 12, 14; Herm. Past. Mand. III. etc. When construed with the principal verb the same expression naturally took the sense of 'in good faith,' 'faithfully,' as in 2 Kings xxii. 7, בִּי בֶאֱמוּנָה הֵם עֹשִׂים = ὅτι ἐν πίστει αὐτοὶ ποιοῦσι, LXX. The whole clause, constructed as we have supposed, receives a remarkable illustration from a passage in the Shepherd of Hermas (Vis. I. 3), which seems to be a reminiscence of the one before us, and which in like manner has given rise to two different interpretations; it stands thus: καὶ πάντα ὁμαλὰ γίνεται τοῖς ἐκλεκτοῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα ἀποδῷ αὐτοῖς τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν ἣν ἐπαγγείλατο μετὰ πολλῆς δόξης καὶ χαρᾶς, ἐὰν τηρήσωσι τὰ νόμιμα τοῦ θεοῦ ἃ παρέλαβον ἐν μεγάλῃ πίστει (ed. Hilgenf. 1866, p. 7, comp. add. p. 175); in the Old Lat. transl.:...si seruauerint legitima dei, quae acceperunt in magna fide (ed. Hilgenf. 1873). Translators and editors have generally attached the last three words to the verb which immediately precedes, and so Zahn: dass die Christen

95 uerunt quae per fidem data est lex. Quartus ordo, intellegentes requiem quam nunc in promptuariis congregati requiescent cum silentio multo ab angelis conser-96 uati, †atque in nouissimis eorum manentem gloriam.† Quintus ordo, exultantes quomodo corruptibile effugerint nunc, et futurum quomodo hereditatem posside-

95. quam quem altered to qua. atque et quae altered to atque.
96. corruptibile corriptibili altered to corruptibile. futurum futurum altered to futuram. possidebunt possedēr.

sic [die Gesetze Gottes] in grossem Glauben empfangen haben ('Der Hirt des Hermas untersucht,' p. 176). He also refers in connexion with the subject to another passage from the same work: οὗτος γάρ ἐστιν ὁ διδοὺς αὐτοῖς τὸν νόμον εἰς τὰς καρδίας τῶν πιστευόντων, Simil. VIII. 3. (From this point of view reference might also be made to the following quotation from Papias: οὐδὲ (ἔχαιρον) τοῖς τὰς ἀλλοτρίας ἐντολὰς μνημονεύουσιν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς τὰς παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου τῇ πίστει δεδομένας καὶ ἀπ' αὐτῆς παραγινομένας (v. l. -νοις) τῆς ἀληθείας. Eus. Hist. Eccl. III. 39.)

On the other hand the structure of the preceding clause, and the presence of the strong epithet before πίστει, might be urged in favour of connecting these words with τηρήσωσι, and accordingly we find the passage thus rendered by the latest English translator: if they shall keep with firm faith the laws of God which they have received (The Shepherd of Hermas, transl. by C. H. Hoole, 1870).

lex] Attracted, like punitio in the preceding verse, to the case of the relative. See Winer's Gr. XXIV. 2 (ed. Moulton). Examples of this construction (occasionally altered by later scribes) are found in iv. 23 (populum Codd. A., S., populus C. 3, 7, 8, 10, 11, Il.), vi. 54, vii. 32 (animae Codd. A., S., animas C. 3, 5, 7, 8, 10, 11, Il.), xiii. 49 (where Cod. A. has gentes pr. m., gentium e corr.). Comp. also the next note.

95. †atque in nouissimis eorum manentem gloriam.†] Want of familiarity with the particular usage of 'manet' mentioned above (see note on v. 93) seems here also to have introduced corruption into the text of the Lat. It will be seen that atque was in the first instance written as et quae; if we take this as the clue to the original construction, we may restore the passage thus: et quae in nouissimis eas (or eis) manet gloria. This emendation will bring the clause into harmony with the Syr. and Æth., and will better explain the epithet which Ambrose uses in his paraphrase of this verse: et futuram sui gloriam praeuidere. Comp. especially his language in Extr. C.: Alias manet poena, alias gloria.

96. I have recurred to the original reading futurum (=τὸ μέλλον), which is supported by the Syr. and Æth. The correction to futuram was made at a later time, to help the reader through a construction which had become obsolete. Among the early attempts to get a Latin equivalent for the Greek compound κληρονομεῖν, one was, to resolve it into the two words haereditatem possidere, followed by an accusative; e. g. et semen eius haereditatem possidebit terram, Ps. xxiv. 13 Rom. Martianaei, Corb. et Coislin. (Sabat.), ipsi haereditatem possidebunt terram, Ps. xxxvi. 9 MSS. Sangerm. Coislin. et Corb. (id.), haereditatem possideamus nobis sanctuarium Dei, Ps. lxxxii. 13 MS. Sangerm., Psalt. Corb. et Mozar. (id.). Again in the Old Lat. Speculum: ut benedictionem hereditatem possideatis 1 Pet. iii. 9 (Mai, Nov. Patr. Bibl. I. 2, p. 16), but when quoted again it stands thus: ut ben. hereditate poss. (id. p. 24). Comp. also Jer. xlix. 1 and Ezek. xxxiii. 25 in the Cod. Amiat. In all these instances we find a second and an easier reading, haereditate poss., which, confirmed as it was by the weight of Augustine's authority, succeeded ultimately in supplanting the other. In a short discussion on the best way of rendering κληρονομεῖν, that father says: Melius ergo duobus uerbis insinuatur integer sensus; siue dicatur, Haereditate possedi; siue dicatur, Haereditate acquisiui: non haereditatem, sed haereditate, Enarr. in Ps. cxviii. 111. There is one other passage in the 4th book of Ezra, where this archaic bunt, adhuc autem uidentes angustum et [labore] plenum, quoniam liberati sunt, 97 et spatiosum, [quod incipient] recipere fruiscentes et immortales. Sextus ordo, quando eis ostenderetur, quomodo incipiet uultus eorum fulgere sicut sol, et quomodo 98 incipient stellarum adsimilari lumini, amodo non corrupti. Septimus ordo, qui est omnibus supradictis maior, quoniam exultabunt cum fiducia et quoniam confide-

96. angustum angustam altered to angustum. et [labore] plenum et plenum. et spatiosum [quod incipient] recipere et spatiosum recipere. fruiscentes frui nescientes.

97. ostendetur ostenditur. amodo quomodo.

98. fiducia fiducia altered to -tia. confidebunt confidebunt altered to confident.

expression originally stood, though now disguised by successive corrections, viz. chap. vi. 59, quare non hereditatem possidemus cum saeculo? (ed. Fritzsche). Here the poss. nostram saeculo of Cod. S. leads us halfway back to the true reading, poss. nostrum saeculum, which is required by the versions, and preserved in Cod. A. alone. In the latter part of this verse it will be found that the Lat. has been much corrupted. I have attempted to emend it by the aid of the Syr., the Æth., and the extract (D) from Ambrose, where he again takes up the fifth order, and professes to give a verbal quotation. The sense would be still clearer if, as the Syr. suggests, a quo were substituted for quoniam.

fruiscentes] This rare word has been corrupted in the MS. to frui nescientes, and replaced by the simple form fruentes in Ambrose. Besides the examples given in Lexicons, the verb occurs in Tob. iii. 9, MS. Regin. Suec. (Rönsch, p. 236), and Commodianus, Instr. XXXVII., Carm. Apol. 298 (Pitra, Spic. Solesm. I. pp. 29, 540).

97. Comp. Dan. xii. 3. Matth. xiii. 43.

amodo] The quomodo of our MS. seems to have been suggested by the preceding clauses. The Syr. and Æth. are in favour of the change to amodo. Comp. Ambrose also, who has qui tamen fulgor earum corruptelam iam sentire non possit.

98. cum fiducia] The MS. of the Arab. has here بعظم ذالك. The latter word has occasioned some difficulties. Ockley says: There is no such Arabick word that I know of, as occurs here in the MS. He accordingly left a lacuna in the translation which was filled up by Fabricius thus: (in magnitudine) BEATITATIS. Ewald remarks: ذالك verschrieben für دالك d. i. دالّة: ich bemerke dies nur Ockley's wegen. Steiner follows with a new conjecture: Für ذالك ist nicht (wie Ewald will) دالّة, sondern ذاتَ zu lesen: dass sie sich freuen werden über dio Grösse seines (Gottes) Wesens... There can be no doubt, however, that so far as the correction to دالّة is concerned, Ewald is correct, though by translating it mit höchster Lust, in his 'Wiederherstellung,' which is here based on the Arab., he fails to bring out the special meaning of the word. After all, the form دالّة is given in Castell's Lex., referred to the root دال fut. o. It occurs in Bar Bahlul as the explanation of the corresponding Syr. word in this passage, ܓܪܝܐ, and it stands in the Arab. of the Polygl., where the Gk. has παῤῥησία, throughout the Epistles of St. Paul and St. John, except in Eph. vi. 19, Phil. i. 20, and Col. ii. 15, where مجاهرة is used, which is the constant equivalent in the Acts of the Apostles, as علانية is in the Gospels.

confidebunt] So ostendebitur vi. 28 Codd. A. and S. and surgebit xvi. 10 Cod. S.; for verbs of the 3rd conj. with fut. in -ebo see Rönsch, pp. 291, 521, and J. N. Ott, Neue Jahrbücher für Philol. u. Päday. 1874, p. 838. Add, from the Cod. Ashburnh., canebunt Num. x. 5; from the Old Lat. Speculum, cadebunt Is. xxxiv. 4 (Mai, Nov. Patr. Bibl. I. 2, p. 36), Prov. xvi. 2 (id. p. 48), Matth. xxiv. 29 (id. p. 37); metuebit Eccles. xviii. 27 (id. p. 49): from the Cod. Bobbiens., resurgebit Mark x. 34 (Wiener bunt non confusi, et gaudebunt non reuerentes, festinant enim uidere uultum 99 [eius], cui seruiunt uiuentes et a quo incipiunt gloriosi mercedem recipere. Hic ordo animarum iustorum, ut amodo adnuntiatur, praedictae uiae cruciatus, quas 100 patientur amodo qui neglexerint. Et respondi et dixi: ergo dabitur tempus animabus postquam separatae fuerint de corporibus, ut uideant de quo mihi 101 dixisti? Et dixit: septem diebus erit libertas earum, ut uideant qui praedicti 102 sunt sermones, et postea congregabuntur in habitaculis suis. Et respondi et dixi:

98. reuerentes reuertentes. uultum [eius] uultum.
99. adnuntiatur, praedictae...anuntientur praedictae... quas quas altered to quos. patientur patiuntur.
100. separatae separati altered to separatae.
101. qui praedicti quae praedictae altered to qui praedicti.

Jahrbücher der Lit. Vol. 121), exsurgebit Mark xiii. 12 (id.); from the Cod. Amiat., canebit Hos. ii. 15. The frequent use of this form is a marked feature in the verses translated from the Gk. which are interspersed throughout the Vulg. of Isaiah publ. by Jos. Cozza (Sacr. Bibl. Vetustiss. Fragm. ex Palimps. Codd. Bibl. Cryptoferratensis, Romae, 1867); e.g. apponebitis xvi. 8, ascendebit xxxiv. 10, bibebunt xix. 5, eadebit xxii. 25, claudebit xxix. 10, confidebunt xvii. 8, currebunt xl. 31, deponebit xxxiii. 23, descendebis xiv. 15, dicebitis xix. 11, ponebit xxii. 18, supponebit xix. 16.

non reuerentes] The parallelism requires us to read thus, by the omission of a single letter; similarly in Ecclus. xli. 19, Cod. S. Theod. has reuertimini for reuereamini. Compare the phrase confundantur et reuereantur, Ps. xxxiv. 4 (and verse 26 in Jerome, from the Hebr.), xxxix. 15, lxix. 3, in which places αἰσχυνθείησαν (καταισχ—Ps. xxxix. 15), καὶ ἐντραπείησαν stands in the LXX., similarly Ps. lxx. 24. This emendation is also supported by the paraphrase of Ambrose, et sine trepidatione laetentur. Referring to the other versions we find that the above clause is either absent or obscured.

uultum [eius] The pronoun has been inserted from the paraphrase of Ambrose supported by the Syr., the Æth., and Arab., as the following clauses would be harsh without it.

gloriosi] A rendering of δεδοξασμένος by its adjectival ἔνδοξος (e.g. 1 Pet. i. 8), instead of its strict participial sense (comp. נִכְבָּד). The use of gloriosi here may be illustrated by cases where it interchanges with a passive form, as quam gloriosus fuit, 2 Sam. vi. 20, whilst the same passage as quoted by Ambrose in Ps. cxviii. stands thus: quid utique honorificatus est (Τί δεδόξασται, LXX.), so also gloriosior apparebo, 2 Sam. vi. 22, glorificabor, in Ambr. (ib.). Again, nomen meum gloriosum est, Hieron. in Mal. i. 11, glorificatum est in the quotation of the same verse by Hieron. in Is. lix, Tert. adv. Marc. III. 22, IV. 1, Aug. Epist. 93, 185 (see Sabat.). Comp. also 1 Macc. ii. 64.

99. The text of our MS. is here corrupt. I have made a few slight changes, but something more is necessary in order to disentangle the two clauses. If we refer to the other versions, both the Æth. and the Arab. suggest the insertion of et haec before praedictae, a correction which might be proposed with confidence if it were favoured by the Syr. also, but this version would lead us to reconstruct the Lat. thus: et praedictas uias cruciatus patientur amodo... If we look merely at the Lat. text, the addition of sunt might be accepted as a solution of the difficulty, e.g., praedictae sunt uiae cruc. quas, etc. For neglexerint see note on diligentia, verse 37. At the end of this verse the Syr. repeats, with a few verbal variations, our eightieth verse (= end of verse 39 Syr.). In the Arm. vv. 79—87 are transferred to this place (after iustorum).

100. tempus] The Syr. alone has an unnecessary addition, locus aut tempus.

si inueni gratiam ante oculos tuos, demonstra mihi adhuc seruo tuo, si in die 103 iudicii iusti impios excusare poterint uel deprecari pro eis Altissimum, Si patres pro filiis, uel filii pro parentibus, si fratres pro fratribus, si adfines pro proximis, 104 si fidentes pro carissimis. [Et respondit ad me et dixit: quoniam inuenisti gratiam ante oculos meos, et hoc demonstrabo tibi: dies iudicii dies decretorius est, et omnibus signaculum ueritatis ostendet; quemadmodum enim nunc non mittit pater filium, uel filius patrem, uel dominus seruum], uel fidus carissimum, ut pro

102. poterint poterint altered to poterunt. uel et altered to uel.
104. [Et respondet—seruum] is not in the MS. uel fidus carissimum uel written over an eras., dus carisimum altered to pro fido carissimus.

102. impios excusare] In the Syr. ܠܡܫܒܩ ܠܚܝܒܐ ܕܐܢܫ on which Le Hir remarks: "Interrogare impios." Gr. ἐρωτᾶν περὶ uel ὑπὲρ, bis translatus est in Syr., prius falso per "interrogare," deinde rectius uoce ܫܐܠ, petere. The Syr., however, does not deviate from the Lat., for the verb must be taken as Aphel and rendered excusare. We have an instance of this rare use of the form in Luke xiv. 18, 19, Cur. Syr. ܫܪܝܠܝ = ἔχε με παρῃτημένον habe me excusatum.

poterint = poterunt, so also vii. 14 Cod. D. See Rönsch, pp. 294, 521. Add Luke xiii. 24 Cod. Rehdig., Luke xxi. 15 Cod. Bezae (ed. Scrivener), Cod. Amiat., Lindisfarne Gospels (ed. Skeat), Assumpt. Mos. iv. 8 (ed. Fritzsche). Comp. erint xvi. 66, 70, 72 Cod. S., Lev. viii. 32, etc., Num. iii. 45, iv. 7, 31, v. 9, etc. Cod. Ashburnh.

103. fidentes] This word corresponds to fidus in the next verse, similarly fidentibus is opposed to perfidis in datur uelocius tutela fidentibus, perfidis poena, Cypr. de Mortal. xv. We have instances of participial forms used as substantives in discens = discipulus μοθητής, e.g. in Acts vi. 5 Cod. Par. 6400 (Journ. of Philol. ii. p. 243), audiens = auditor ἀκροατής, Jac. i. 25 Cod. Corb. (Sabat.). For other refl. see Rönsch, It. u. Vulg. p. 107, D. N. T. Tertullian's, p. 628, and Hartel's Ind. to Cypr. sub Participia. The word fidentes seems to be merely a peculiarity of the Lat.; there is nothing in the Oriental verss. suggestive of any other reading than φίλοι. Comp. for the argument, Hippolytus in the work before quoted: τούτους...οὐ παράκλησις συγγενῶν μεσιτευσάντων ὀνήσει (ed. de Lagarde, p. 71), and for the language, Constit. Apost. ii. 14: Εἰ δὲ πατέρες ὑπὲρ τέκνων οὐ τιμωροῦνται, οὔτε υἱοὶ ὑπὲρ πατέρων, δῆλον ὡς οὔτε γυναῖκες ὑπὲρ ἀνδρῶν, οὔτε οἰκέται ὑπὲρ δεσποτῶν, οὔτε συγγενεῖς ὑπὲρ συγγενῶν, οὔτε φίλοι ὑπὲρ φίλων, οὔτε δίκαιοι [var. lect. δίκαιος] ὑπὲρ ἀδίκων· ἀλλ' ἕκαστος ὑπὲρ τοῦ οἰκείου ἔργου τὸν λόγον ἀπαιτηθήσεται. Οὔτε γὰρ Νῶε... Hilgenf. quotes an illustration from Apocal. Esdrae, p. 27, ed. Tischend.

104. Et respondit—uel dominus seruum] This passage is omitted in our MS., and the construction of the following words has been adapted to the context by a corrector. The lacuna is here filled up by the aid of the other translations.

signaculum ueritatis] ܫܘܡܗܐ ܕܫܪܪܐ = σφραγὶς τῆς ἀληθείας, and in accordance with this the Arab. كمثل الختم المحق 'like the seal that confirms the truth.' I therefore see no reason for accepting the conjecture الحتم gemäss dem die Wahrheit entscheidenden Beschluss, which is proposed by Steiner (Hilgenf. Zeitschr. xi. p. 429), and embodied in the translation given by Hilgenf.

intellegat] According to the Syr. and Æth., the original would be ἵνα νοσῇ, for which there seems to have been a various reading, ἵνα νοῇ, which is represented in the clearest way by the Lat. and Arab.[2] Examples of a similar confusion are not uncommon, e.g. Chrysos. Hom. in Matth 692 A, νοσήματα μανικά (ed. Bened.), where Field restores νοήματα, and Seve-

105 eo intellegat, aut dormiat, aut manducet, aut curetur; Sic nunquam nemo pro aliquo rogabit, omnes enim portabunt unusquisque tunc iniustitias suas aut iustitias.
106 (36) Et respondi et dixi: et quomodo inuenimus modo, quoniam rogauit primus Abraham propter Sodomitas, et Moyses...

104. curetur *curæ.
105. Sic Et dix̄ added later before sic. rogabit rogauit altered to rogabit.

rus, hom. CIII. (Mai, Scriptorum vet. nova coll. IX. 731) Τὸν ταῖς κεφαλαῖς πολύν, τὸν πρῶτον νοήσαντα τὸ ποικίλον τῆς πονηρίας καὶ πατέρα πάσης σχολιότητος [leg. σκολ-], where Jacob of Edessa must have read νοσήσαντα, as appears from his translation:

ܗܘ ܕܢܦܩ ܒܟܠ ܫܘܠܛܢ ܗܘ ܕܫܪܝ ܒܟܠ ܫܘܠܛܢ ܗܘ ܐܒܐ ܕܟܠ ܚܒܝܬܘ ܕܥܠܡܐ ܘܐܒܐ ܕܟܠ ܚܛܝܬܐ ܕܥܠ ܟܠ ܡܕܡ ܕܐܬܝ ܡܢ ܚܛܝܬܐ (Add. MS. 12159 fol. 231. a. 2. Brit. Mus.). Comp. also Cobet, Novae Lectiones, pp. 283, 284.

105. omnes enim portabunt...] The Arab. has بل كل احد يقوم بجملة, which is translated by Ockley: But every one shall stand for all (that he hath done). Steiner would alter the last word to بعمله sondern jeder Einzelne steht ein für sein Thun. I prefer to read بحمله 'each shall stand with his burden;' this would involve less change, and at the same time preserve an idea which is expressed in the oldest versions.

EXTRACTS FROM AMBROSE AND JEROME.

(A) Comp. 4 Ezra VII. 36—42.

IBIMUS eo ubi paradisus est iucunditatis[1],.....ubi nullae nubes, nulla tonitrua, nullae coruscationes[2], nulla ventorum procella, neque tenebrae, neque uesper, neque aestas, neque hyems uices uariabunt[3] temporum. Non frigus, non grando, non pluuiae, non solis istius erit usus, aut lunae, neque stellarum globi: sed sola Dei fulgebit claritas. Dominus enim erit lux omnium....Ambr. de bono Mortis XII. (Ed. Bened. I. col. 411).

[1] par. iocund. est. GMPQ. [2] nulle choruscationes sunt P. [3] narrabunt Q.

(B) Comp. 4 Ezra III. 5; VII. 78.

Ambrosius Horontiano salutem....De quo tibi Esdrae librum legendum suadeo, qui et illas philosophorum nugas despexerit; et abditiore prudentia, quam collegerat ex revelatione, perstrinxerit eas (animas) substantiae esse superioris. Ambr. Ep. XXXIV. (Ed. Bened. II. col. 922).

(C) Comp. 4 Ezra VII. 80—87.

Ergo dum exspectatur plenitudo temporis, exspectant animae remunerationem debitam. Alias manet poena, alias gloria: et tamen nec illae interim sine iniuria, nec istae sine fructu sunt. Nam et illae[1] uidentes[2] seruantibus legem Dei repositam esse mercedem gloriae, conseruari earum ab Angelis habitacula, sibi autem dissimulationis et contumaciae supplicia futura, et pudorem et confusionem; ut intuentes gloriam Altissimi, erubescant in eius conspectum uenire, cuius mandata temerauerint[3]. Ambr. de bono Mortis X. (Ed. Bened. I. col. 408).

[1] Nam ille Q. [2] uidentes altered to uident E. [3] temerauerunt GMPQ.

(D) Comp. 4 Ezra VII. 91—101.

Iustarum autem[1] animarum per ordines quosdam digesta erit laetitia[2]. Primum, quod uicerint carnem, nec illecebris eius inflexae[3] sint. Deinde, quod pro pretio sedulitatis et innocentiae suae, securitate potiantur, nec quibusdam sicut impiorum animae erroribus[4] et perturbationibus implicentur, atque uitiorum suorum memoria torqueantur, et exagitentur[5] quibusdam curarum aestibus. Tertio[6], quod seruatae a se legis diuino[7] testimonio fulciantur[8], ut factorum suorum incertum supremo iudicio non uereantur euentum. Quarto[9], quia incipiunt intelligere[10] requiem suam, et futuram sui gloriam praeuidere, eaque se consolatione mulcentes, in habitaculis suis cum magna tranquillitate requiescent stipatae praesidiis Angelorum. Quintus autem ordo exsultationis uberrimae habet[11] suauitatem, quod ex hoc corruptibilis corporis carcere in lucem libertatemque peruenerint, et repromissam sibi possideant hereditatem.....Denique sexto ordine demonstrabitur iis[12], quod uultus earum[13] sicut sol incipiat[14] refulgere, et stellarum luminibus comparari; qui tamen fulgor earum corruptelam iam sentire non possit. Septimus uero ordo is[15] erit, ut exsultent cum fiducia, et sine ulla cunctatione confidant, et sine trepidatione laetentur, festinantes uultum eius uidere, cui sedulae seruitutis obsequia detulerunt: de quo[16] innoxiae conscientiae[17] recordatione praesumant gloriosam mercedem laboris exigui, quam[18] incipientes recipere, cognouerunt indignas esse[19] huius temporis passiones, quibus remunerationis aeternae gloria tanta refertur[20]. Hic ordo, inquit, animarum, quae sunt iustorum, quas[21] etiam immortales non dubitauit dicere in quinto ordine; eo quod spatium, inquit[22], incipiunt recipere fruentes et immortales[23]. Haec est, inquit, requies earum[24] per septem ordines, et futurae gloriae prima perfunctio, priusquam in suis habitationibus quietae congregationis munere perfruantur[25]. Unde ait Propheta ad Angelum: Ergo dabitur tempus animabus, postquam separatae fuerint de corporibus[26], ut uideant ea quomodo[27] dixisti[?] Et dixit Angelus: Septem dies erit libertas earum, ut uideant, in septem diebus, qui praedicti sunt ser-mones, et postea congregabuntur in habitaculis suis. Haec ideo plenius de iustorum ordinibus expressa sunt, quam de passionibus impiorum; quia melius est cognoscere quomodo innocentes saluentur, quam quomodo crucientur flagitiosi. Ambr. de bono Mortis XI. (Ed. Bened. I. col. 408, 409).

[1] uero EGMPQ. [2] digesta lc̣ticia ÷ (÷ over eras.) E. om. erit GMPQ. [3] inflexi altered to inflexae EM. inflexi PQ. [4] terroribus Cod. Reg. (quoted in Bened. Ed.) [5] exagitantur MQ. [6] tertium MPQ. [7] diuinae legis test. G. [8] fulciuntur EGMPQ. [9] Quartum EMP. Quartum c̄ Q. [10] intell. incip. G. [11] exul. habet uberrimae EGMPQ. [12] his EGP. hiis Q. [13] earum EGMPQ. [14] incipiet Laur. Volckm. Hilg. Fritzsche. [15] ordo his erit EP. ordo hiis erit Q. hiis ordo erit G. [16] de q̄ E. [17] constantiae EMPQ. [18] quem MPQ. [19] om. esse GP. [20] gloria tanta refertur EMPQ. tanta gloria largitur et refertur G. gl. tan. referatur Laur. Volckm. Hilg. Fritzsche. [21] quos EMPQ. [22] om. inquit G. [23] fruentes et immortales sunt. EGMP. [24] animarum Fabr. Laur. Volckm. Hilg. Fritzsche. [25] gloriae; Prima quiete congregationis munere perfruantur. Perfunctio prius quam in suis habitationibus. Unde E. [26] corpore G. [27] de quo modo for ea quomodo EGMPQ.

[E=MS. I. 3. 21. Emmanuel Coll. Cambridge. G=MS. 114. Gonville and Caius Coll. Cambridge. M=MS. 5. A. xv. Brit. Museum. P=MS. 193. Pembroke Coll. Cambridge. Q=MS. 203. Pembroke Coll. Cambridge.]

(E) Comp. 4 Ezra VII. 102—

Dicis in libello tuo, quod dum uiuimus, mutuo pro nobis[1] orare possumus[2], postquam autem mortui fuerimus, nullius sit pro alio exaudienda oratio, praesertim cum Martyres ultionem sui sanguinis obsecrantes, impetrare non quiuerint[3]. . . .

. . . . .

. . . . .

Tu uigilans dormis, et dormiens scribis: et proponis[4] mihi librum apocryphum, qui sub nomine Esdrae a te, et similibus tuis[5] legitur: ubi scriptum est, quod post mortem nullus pro aliis audeat[6] deprecari: quem ego librum nunquam legi. Quid enim necesse est in manus[7] sumere, quod Ecclesia non recipit? nisi forte Balsamum mihi, et Barbelum[8], et Thesaurum Manichaei, et ridiculum nomen Leusiborae proferas[9], et quia ad radices Pyrenaei habitas, uicinusque es Iberiae, Basilidis antiquissimi haeretici, et imperitae scientiae, incredibilia portenta prosequeris[10], et proponis[11] quod totius orbis auctoritate damnatur. Hieron. contra Vigilantium. (Opp. ed. Vallarsius, II. col. 392, 393).

[1] om. pro nobis ABCDU. [2] possimus BCDU. [3] impetr. nequiuerint ABCDU. [4] propinas Fabr. Laur. Volckm. Hilg. Fritzsche. [5] tui V. [6] gaudeat Fabr. Laur. Lücke Volckm. Hilg. Fritzsche. [7] in manu EF. [8] barbelo ABCDEFU. barbellū V. [9] om. proferas CEFU. [10] persequeris ABCDUV. perquires EF. [11] proponcs EF.

[A=MS. 6 C. XI. Brit. Mus. B=MS. 6. D. I. Brit. Mus. C=MS. 6. D. II. Brit. Mus. D=MS. 6. D. III. Brit. Mus. E=Harl. 5003. Brit. Mus. F=Burney 322. Brit. Mus. U=Dd. II. 7. Univ. Libr. Cambridge. V=Dd. VII. I. Univ. Libr. Cambridge.]

ADDENDA.

PAGE 1, note 3. The Vatican MS. of the Arabic vers. (= Cod. V.), written apparently in the 16th century, proves to be a copy of the Oxford MS., Bodl. 251 (= Cod. B.), which is dated Anno Martyrum 1051 (= A. D. 1335). The relationship of these two MSS. might have been suspected from comparing the lists of their contents, e. g. 1 Ezra (= 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.), Ezra, Neh., Tobit, appear in the same order in both, (comp. Mai, Scrip. Vet. N.C. IV. p. 3 with Nicoll, Cat. Codd. MSS. Ox. Bibl. Bodl. p. 13). But Dr. Guidi's collation furnishes conclusive evidence of the origin of Cod. V.: e.g. in VII. 94 (Ew. 75, p. 33, l. 11) the word بها is nearly obliterated in Cod. B., it is absent from Cod. V. In VII. 95 (Ew. 75, p. 33, l. 13) the word الساعة in Cod. B. has lost portions of its last two letters, and in its mutilated form resembles السک, which is the reading of Cod. V. In VII. 96 (Ew. 75, p. 33, l. 17) there are some defects in the MS., where the word stands, which Ewald takes to be المشا, in Cod. V. it is written المسلک, and from the traces that still remain, we may infer that this was the original reading of Cod. B. In VII. 97 (Ew. 75, p. 33, l. 18) some strokes have been rubbed out from the middle of مستنيره in Cod. B., the word consequently appears as منيره in Cod. V. There is a hole in Cod. B. at the end of VII. 100 (Ew. 77), so that the last word is imperfect, but the points below the line are rather in favour of the reading قيل, as Cod. V. gives it, than of تقول, as Ewald edits. The words او منک يا ادم are written by a later hand in Cod. B, at the foot of the page, where the last word is اخطات VII. 118 (48, Ew. 90), they stand after the same word in the text of Cod. V. The latter MS. differs from the printed text in reading والعالم VII. 70 (Ew. 62), هذا الامر VII. 75 (Ew. 66) and فازت اذا VII. 76 (Ew. 67), but it has been found on inspection to represent in these cases also, with but slight deviations, the text of Cod. B. In one respect the copy varies from the original, viz. by the introduction of a greater number of errors in orthography and grammar: it has, for instance, د for ذ nearly always, ت for ث, ح for خ, ص for ض, ز for ژ, sometimes ق for ک, as in تدرقة VII. 42 (Ew. 39), مسلوقة V. 3. Again, ابتچل for ابتچال VII. 42 (Ew. 40), احبنى for اجابنى VI. 1, etc., ينالوا for ينالون VII. 47 (Ew. 44), الشيا for الاشيا V. 44, etc., هدا for هذه, الاوله for الاولى VII. 92 (Ew. 75). But though exhibiting a debased form of the language, the Vatican copy will be of some service in supplying what has been obliterated or lost in the MS. of the Bodleian.

Page 2, note 2. Possibly another version has in like manner been printed and neglected; for the list of books contained in the Georgian Bible, fol. Moskau, 1743, seems to include the 4th of Esdr., disguised by a different enumeration[1]. It would be interesting to have some trustworthy information on this subject. The Georgian translation of the Old Test. is said to have been made in the sixth century, from the Greek, and to have been subsequently corrected from the old Slavonic.

Page 2, note 4. The Vatican MS. of Arab.[2] is stated to belong to the 14th century. It differs in many respects from the Bodleian MS., but especially in exhibiting an unabridged form of the text, so that it will prove an important contribution to the criticism of this particular version. A few examples of its readings are given below.

Page 3, latter part of note 5. I may here notice a modern Hebrew translation of 4 Esdr. XIII., written in rabb. char. at the end of Cod. 272, in the Library of De-Rossi at Parma. It is thus described in the Cat. Excerptum ex lib. IV. Esdrae Cap. xiii. ex Bibliis christianorum, seu latinis hebraice versum, membr. et chart. in 4° an. 1487. MSS. Codd. Hebr. Biblioth. I. B. de-Rossi, I. p. 155.

Dr. A. Neubauer has kindly forwarded to me the following specimen of this translation:

טופס העתקת מספר רביעי מיוחס לעזרא הסופר הנמצא בכתיבה עולדית בספר רביעי מעזרא פרק י"ג וזה לשונו

(1) ויהי לאחרי שבעת ימים חלמתי חלום לילה (2) והנה רוחות עולות מים לסער הימן גליו (3) ותרוחה והנה התחזק לחם עם נשלות הסוסים ומידי כעותו להבין מרדו כל הנרחים תחתיו (4) ובכל מקום לאבר ילא קולו בשרו כל הסומעים כאשר תבער לרן בהריחה לחם (5) ותרוחה לא׳כ׳ והנה רגבו גוים לחין מספר מלרבע רוחות הסוסים להלחם עם הלים העולה מן הים (6) ותרוחה והנה תקק לו הר גבוה ויעף עליו (7) ותני

[1] . . . "13, 14) die beyden (Bücher) der Chronik, 15) Esras, 16) Nehemias, 17) das 2te und 18) das 3te Buch Esras, 19) Tobias" . . . (Eichhorn's Allg. Bibl. I. A.D. 1787, p. 168). I have not been able to find a copy of the edition of the Georgian Bible here referred to.

בקשתי לרחות את המלכ'[1] זו את המקום מזין נחקק הזר ולא יכולתי. [8] ואח'כ רחיתי והנה כל המתקבצים
אליו להלחם אתו ירחיש מאד ואחנם העיזו פניהם להלחם [9] והנה כאשר רחה רגשת ההמון הבא לא הריס
ידו . . . [53] זה פתרון החלום אשר רחית ובאשר הרחית לדעת [54] כי עוזת מחשבותיך ומחת עשתונותיך
לנקם את תורתי. [55] ונפשך הכינות לחכמה ושכלך קרחת היות קטן מהכיל [56] ע"כ הרחיתיך הנסתרות
אשר עם ס' לא אחד אחנם בעוד שלשת ימים אדבר עוד אליך ואבאר גדולות ונוראות [57] ואלך ואעבור בהדם מפאר ומשבח מאד לעם עליון והנוראות אשר עשה [58] יוסב ון [ודן leg.] את כל העולם כולו.
עד כאן נעתק מהמקום הנ"ל

I have just received, through the kindness of the Abbate Pietro Perreau, a transcript of the entire chapter, but the sample which I have printed will, no doubt, be thought sufficient. This Hebr. version of Chap. XIII. appears to have been made from an early printed edition of the Latin Bible, in which the abbreviations were not always understood by the translator, e.g. he probably found in verse 36 ōndet[2] (= ostendetur), which he took for an active verb[2], and in verse 55 mr̄em (= matrem), which he expanded into minorem, and paraphrased[3].

Page 5, line 7. The date of Cod. S. is inserted in the initial letter O, at the beginning of Ecclesiasticus, (see Nouv. Traité de Diplomatique, III. p. 128).

Page 6, line 10. 'non réglées' rather 'réglées a la pointe sèche', but the traces of the ruling are scarcely visible in some sheets.

Page 8, note 1. My friend, the Rev. H. B. Swete, B.D., Fellow of Gonv. and Cai. Coll. Camb., has, at my suggestion, undertaken an edition of the Comm. of Theod. Mopsuest. on the shorter epistles of St Paul. From his collation of the two MSS., I will insert in these Addenda a few further illustrations of peculiar forms and constructions.

Page 10, note 3. Add to the list of contractions found in Cod. S. dieb;, dix̄, ei', en̄i, frs̄, n̄, mⁱ, oma, sclm, uob.

I have been able to glean a few readings from some of the MSS. mentioned below (p. 82, seq.).

Page 19, note 1. sequenti precedente VI. 12, Codd. Arras, Cambrai.

Page 19, note 3. et pauor IV. 24, Codd. Arr., Cambrai.

[1] מלכות is again the rendering of regio in verse 45.

[2] The words Syon autem ueniet, et ostendetur (ōndet[2]) omnibus parata et edificata are thus translated:
ולציון אחנם יבא ויורה לכל העתידות והבנויות.

[3] The two contractions, here referred to, occur in a Venice Bible of 1478.

Page 19, note 5. om. oro VI. 12, Cod. Dou., om. oro ut, Cod. Orl.

Page 20, note 1. uoluptate III. 8, Codd. Orl., Dou., pro ualidis VII. 112 (42), Dou.

Page 20, note 3. recipe II. 40, Cod. Dou.

Page 20, line 25. factus est III. 17, Cod. Arr.

Page 20, line 26. facit III. 31, Cod. Arr.

Page 21, line 7. tue enim creature miserearis VIII. 45, Cod. Dou.

Page 21, line 12. hunc sermonem X. 20, Cod. Cambrai, hoc sermonem hunc, Cod. Arr.

Page 21, note 2. om. in ea XI. 32, Cod. Dou.

Page 23, note 1. The following observations on the word 'Arzareth,' XIII. 45, made by an English writer of the 17th century, seem to be unknown. I print them that they may hold their proper place in a résumé of opinions on the subject.

"... True it is indeed that I find the City of Arsaratha, mentioned both in Berosus fragments (I. lib. 3 ?), and in Ptol. (Geogr. l. 5, c. 13, et in Tab. 3 Asiae), placed neere the issue of the river Araxes into the Caspian sea: and it was perhaps one of the Israelitish Colonies, planted in the confines of the Empire of Assyria: for it may well be that Arsaratha is but יער שארית [leg. עיר שארית], or הר שארית, that is the City, or the hill of the remainder: or perhaps ארץ שארית (the last letter of the first word cut off in the Greeke pronounciation for sounds sake), the Land of the remainder: but the tale of eighteene monthes journey, will no more agree with this City, then the region of Arsareth doth, with Geography or History." (Enquiries touching the diversity of Languages, and Religions, through the chiefe parts of the World by Edw. Brerewood, lately professour of Astronomy in Gresham Colledge, 4to, London, 1635, pp. 107, 108.)

Page 24, note 3. I refer in this note to the well-known couplet from Hudibras:

"In mathematics he was greater Than Tycho Brahe, or Erra Pater."

There seems to be no good reason for supposing with Dr Z. Grey[1], that Wm. Lilly (1602—1681) is alluded to in this anticlimax. At any rate the bare assertion of some modern annotators of Hudibras, that such is the case, has the effect of keeping completely out of view the popular astrological tract, which under the name of 'Erra Pater' was frequently reprinted at London in the 16th and 17th centuries. A copy in the

[1] The principal argument on which he relies is an expression found in the 'Memoirs of the years 49 and 50,' p. 75 (publ. in the 2nd Vol. of The Posthumous Works of Sam. Butler, 1715), "O the infallibility of Erra Pater Lilly!"

Brit. Mus. is entitled, "The Pronostycacion for ever of Erra Pater: A Jewe borne in Jewery" ... (Robt. Wyer) London, [circ. 1535]. The significant addition to the name, and above all the fact, that we find essentially the same matter ascribed to the Prophet Esdras, in old French (CLXXVIII. 11, St John's Coll. Oxford, see Coxe's Catalogue), in Latin (MS. Hh. VI. 11 (11), Univ. Libr. Cambridge), and in Greek (Notices et Extraits des MSS. de la Bibl. du Roi, XI. 2, p. 186, and Tischend., Apocalypses Apocryphae, p. xiv.)[1] lead to the conclusion that 'Erra' is a corruption from Ezra[2].

Page 25, note 4. C. Paucker gives examples of districtio 'synon. seueritas; male enim interpretantur Lexicographi.' Zeitschr. f. d. österreichischen Gymnasien, 1874, p. 99.

Page 26, note 4. et antequam estuarent chamini in Syon VI. 4, Cod. Arras, ...chiminoꝑ Syon, Cod. Dou.

Page 31, line 5. Should these coincidences in reading between Cod. A. and later MSS. prove in the end to be too marked and too numerous to be explained by the considerations which I have suggested, then we must assume, that, when Cod. S., in its mutilated form, was adopted as the basis of the text, some other MS., allied to Cod. A., was occasionally consulted in difficult readings. The fact that the lacuna was not filled up from this source will be best accounted for by the supposition that the passage was suppressed for dogmatic reasons.

Page 32, note 1. mira III. 8, Codd. Orl. Arr. Dou.

Page 32, note 3. non in usum fuerit IV. 29, Cod. Arr., non euulsum fuerit, Cod. Dou.

Page 40, line 8 from below. There is an early date in a record of bequest inserted on fol. 1 of Cod. C. 8 (one of the three MSS. containing the curious interpolation et heretici V. 8, see above, p. 23, note 1), which is not noticed by Dean Cowie in his Catalogue of the MSS. of St John's Coll. Cambridge. It runs thus: "Clausa testamenti Magistri Roberti de Pykering quondam decani Ecclesiae Beati Petri Eborum, qui legauit hunc librum prioratui de Gyseburn, et obiit die Jouis ultimo die mensis Decembris, Anno Dni milliō CCC^{mo} XXXII^{do}. Itm̄ delego (altered to do lego) prioratui de Gyseburn Bibliam meam meliorem, pro eo quod libri monasterii fuerunt combusti in combustione

[1] Compare especially in all these places the section which in the English begins thus: "In the yeare that Janyuere shall enter upon the Sondaye the wynter shal be colde, and moyst."

[2] The same kind of astrological literature sometimes appears under other distinguished names, as S. Dionysius, and Ven. Bede (comp. Catal. de la Bibl. de Valenciennes, par J. Mangeart, p. 684).

Ecclesiae sue[1], ita quod faciant anniuersarium meum singulis annis in perpetuum in conuentu."

Page 41, line 5. Here follows a supplementary list of MSS. which contain 4 Esdr. I.—XVI., or any part thereof.

BIBLIOTHECA SUSSEXIANA.

Lat. MSS. No. 4.[2] Bibl. Lat. 8×5 inches. Ff. 513, Saec. XII.—XIII. . . . 'there are the four books of Esdras, and the prayer of Manasseh at the end of 2 Chron.' (Pettigrew's Cat. I. 1. 1827, pp. LXX., LXXI).

THE BRITISH MUSEUM, LONDON.

Cott. MS., Claud. E. 1. fol. Saec. XIII. A vol. containing treatises by Augustine, Arnulf (Abb. Bonae-vallis), Anselm, and Pet. Comestor, and at the end, 4 Esdr. I. II. ('Lib. Esdre prophete[3], filii Sarei'), 3 Esdr. ('Et egit Josias')[4], 4 Esdr. III.—XVI. (Communicated by Prof. W. Wright).

THE MINSTER LIBRARY, YORK.

XVI. D. 13. Bibl. Lat. 4to. Saec. XIII. Presented to the Library in 1833. (Communicated by the Rev. J. Raine).

THE CATHEDRAL LIBRARY, HEREFORD.

P. VII. 1. Bibl. Lat. fol. maj. Saec. XIII.—XIV. At the end of the N. T., 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. I. II. 'Liber Esdrae prophetae secundus'), 3 Esdr., 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. XV. XVI.). (Communicated by the Rev. Dr. Jebb).

THE CATHEDRAL LIBRARY, SALISBURY.

No. 127. Bibl. Lat. $10\frac{3}{4}\times7$ inches. Saec. XIII.—XIV. 3 Esdr. comes between 4 Esdr. I. II. and 4 Esdr. III.—XIV. (Communicated by the Rev. H. W. Pullen).

[1] From an entry in a MS. missal of Giseburne, it appears that this fire took place A.D. 1289. (Catal. of the MSS. at Ashburnham Place. Appendix, No. 44.) Comp. also Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, last ed. Vol. VI. p. 265.

[2] This MS. appears also as No. 32 in one of Thorpe's Catalogues for 1844.

[3] The word secundus, I. 1, is absent from this and from the following MSS., A. C. 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 11., L. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, O. 1, 2, Edinb., Orl., Reims, Dou. This is another point, in which many later MSS. coincide with Cod. A. and not with Cod. S.

[4] Of the two Latin versions of 3 Esdr., viz. the 'Versio Vulgata' (Et fecit Josias Pascha—secundum testamentum Domini Dei Israel), and the 'Versio altera' (Et egit Josias Pascha—secundum dispositionem Domini Dei Israel), the latter, which was first published by Sabatier, is by no means uncommon in MSS. I have observed it also in the following: C. 1, 3, 4, 7, 9, 10, 11, L. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, O. 2, 5, Chartres 157, Orléans 3, 6, Reims 2, and Douai 3. In Orléans 10, the commencement is Celebrauit Josias Pascha. No. CXX., Bibl. Senat. civ. Lips., dated A.D. 1273 (Et elegit Josias Pascha), seems, from the short specimen forwarded to me by Mr. C. R. Gregory, to present a mixed text.

The University Library, Edinburgh.

AC. b. 14. Bibl. Lat. 4to. min. Saec. xiv. 3 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii. 'Liber Esdrae prophetae filii Sarai'), 4 Esdr. (= 3 Esdr. 'Et fecit Josias'), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii—xiv. and xv. xvi.). (Communicated by J. Small, M.A., and the Rev. Dr. W. L. Alexander).

The Library of All Souls' College, Oxford.

No. II. Bibl. Lat., 4to. Saec. xiv. ...1, 2 Paralip., 1 Esdr., 2 Esdr. (= Neh. and 4 Esdr. i. ii.), 3 Esdr. ('Et feciat [sic] Josias'), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii.—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. xv. xvi.), Tob. (Communicated by Prof. Jul. Zupitza).

Bibliothèque Publique d'Orléans.

No. 6. Bibl. Lat., fol. maj. Said to date from a.d. 1179 (Cat. par A. Septier, 1820), I was not able however, on glancing through the pages, to verify this statement. ...1, 2 Paralip., 1 Esdr. (= Ezra aud Neh.), 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii. 'Liber Esdrae prophetae filii Sarei'), 3 Esdr. ('Et egit Josias'), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. xv. xvi.), Judith....

Bibliothèque Communale de la ville d'Amiens.

No. 2. Bibl. Lat. 8vo. Saec. xiii. Abb. de St. Acheul.—'On y trouve tout l'Ancien et le Nouveau Testament, avec ... le 3e. et le 4e. livres d'Esdras.' (Catalogue ... par J. Garnier. Amiens. 1843).

Bibliothèque de Tours.

No. 15. Bibl. Lat. pars. 4to. Saec. xiii. Saint-Martin, 5. ...1, 2 Paralip., 'les quatre Livres d'Esdras,' Tob. i—iii. 4. (Catalogue...par A. Dorange. Tours, 1875).

Bibliothèque de Troyes.

No. 621. 1°. Pet. Comest. Hist. Scol. 2°. Libri Esdrae 2us, 3us, 4us, 5us. 3°. Lib. Thobiae. 4°. Com. in Exod. fol. Saec. xiii. 'Clairvaux .... 2°. Les Livres d'Esdras, ii., iii., iv., v., sont les Livres iii. et iv. autrement partagés que dans les imprimés.' 2 Esdr. (= 3 Esdr.), 3 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii.), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii.—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. xv. xvi.). (Cat. gén. des MSS. des Bibliothèques publiques des Départements, ii. 1855, p. 262).

Bibliothèque Publique de Reims.

No. 2. Bibl. Lat. fol. Saec. xiii—xiv. ...1, 2 Paralip., 1 Esdr. (= Ezra and Neh.), 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii., 'Hic est liber Esdre prophete filii Sarei'), 3 Esdr. ('Et egit Josias'), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii.—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. xv. xvi.), Judith...

Bibliothèque de la ville d'Arras.

No. 785 (ol. 743). Bibl. Lat. 8vo. Saec. xiv. Mon. S. Vedast. ...1, 2 Paralip., Or. Man., 1 Esdr., 2 Esdr. (= Neh.), 3 Esdr. ('Et fecit Josias'), Apocri. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii. 'Liber Esdrae prophetae secundus filii Sarei,' 4 Esdr. iii—xiv. beginning with a capital letter, and 4 Esdr. xv. xvi. beginning with a capital), Judith...

Bibliothèque de Douai.

No. 3[1]. Bibl. Lat. fol. min. Saec. xiv. ...1, 2 Paralip., Or. Man., 1 Esdr., Neh., 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii.), 3 Esdr. ('Et egit Josias'), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii.—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 5 Esdr. xv. xvi.). Hester....

Bibliothèque de Cambrai.

No. 270. Bibl. Lat. in 5 vols. fol. Saec. xiv.—xv. ...1, 2 Paralip., Or. Man., 1 Esdr., Neh., 2 Esdr. (= 3 Esdr. 'Et fecit Josias'), Esdre (= 4 Esdr. i.—xvi.). Tobias...

Bibliothèque de Valenciennes.

No. 2. A. 3. 30, 31. Bibl. Lat., 2 vol., fol. Saec. xvi. St Amand. ...1, 2 Paralip., 1 Esdr., 2 Esdr., 3 Esdr., 4 Esdr., Tob. .... 'Ces deux magnifiques volumes doivent tenir le premier rang parmi ceux que George d'Egmond, 71^e^ Abbé de St Amand, fit confectionner durant sa prélature.' (Catalogue . . . par J. Mangeart. Paris, 1860).

Universitäts-Bibliothek, Erlangen.

No. 610, 611. Bibl. Lat. 2 Bde. fol. Saec. xiv. .... 1, 2 Paralip., 1 Esdr., Neh., 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii. ?), 3 Esdr., 4 Esdr. ('vom vierten ist blos der Anfang des dritten Kapitels geschrieben') Tob. .... (Handschriften-Katalog .... bearb. von J. C. Irmischer, Frankf. a/m. 1852).

Universitäts-Bibliothek, Leipzig.

No. 4. Bibl. Lat. fol. min. Saec. xv. ...1, 2 Paralip., Or. Man., Esdr., Neh., Confessio Esdr., 3 Esdr., 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i.—xvi.)[2] Thob. .... (Communicated by Mr. Caspar René Gregory).

[1] In the Catalogue of the MSS. of the Douai Library by H. R. Duthilloeul, 8vo., Douai, 1846, no mention is made of the presence of 4 Esdr. in this MS., but on the other hand No. 10, Bibl. Lat. pars, fol. Saec. x. is stated to contain ...'Paralip. (duo libri), Esdras (quatuor l.), Hester'.... As a MS. of this age would rank next in importance to Codd. A. and S., I made a point of examining it, while this sheet was passing through the press, and found that it never included more of Esdras than the two canonical books (Ezra and Neh.).

[2] From the omission of ego Salathiel qui et Esdras, iii. 1, and the presence of cubiculo for cubili, ib., coupled with the fact that the whole is divided into xvi. Chapters, I conclude that this MS., like those mentioned above, p. 41, l. 1, merely represents the printed text of the Vulgate.

Bibliotheca Palat. Vindobon.

Bibl. Lat., 8vo. min. Saec. xiv. 'Post L. Neh. fol. 247 reperiuntur duo Esdrae apocryphi, qui hic Secundus et Tertius inscribuntur.' (Codd. MSS. Theologici . . . . Lat. . . . rec . . . M. Denis. II. 1. No. xxix. Vindob. 1799).

Bibl. Lat. fol. Saec. xv. 'Esdras in Libros V. dividitur.' 3 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii. and 3 Esdr.), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii.—xiv.), 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. xv. xvi.). (Id. I. 1. No. xvi. Vindob. 1793.)

Bibl. Lat., fol. Saec. xv. 'a quodam qui Joh. Hussi placita sectabatur, ut videtur, perscripta.' Esdr., Neh., 2 Esdr. (= 3 Esdr.), 3 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. i. ii.), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. iii—xvi.). (Id. I. 1. No. xviii.).

Bibl. Lat., 4to. Saec. xiv. '. . . . Paralip., subjecta in marg. Manassis Oratione, Esdras et Neh., Confessio Esdre desumta ex eius Libro iv. apocr. c. 8. a v. 20—37. non sine varietate ab editis. Tum Prov.' . . . (Id. II. 1. No. xvii.).

Bibl. Lat. pars I., fol. min. Saec. xv. 'Post Libr. Neh. Incipit confessio Esdre, quae nihil est aliud, quam Excerptum ex apocrypho eius Libro iv. c. 8. a v. 20. ad v. 37. rarissime in aliis Codicibus obuium, et dictione varians ab Editis[1] . . . . Hanc Coufessionem excipit Lib. iii. Esdrae hic dictus ii.' (Id. II. 1. No. xliii.).

D. Marci Bibliotheca, Venet.

Cod. V. Bibl. Lat., 4to. min. Saec. circ. xv. 'Esdrae Liber iv. mutilus est fine, et uariam exhibet ab editis lectionem.' (Latina et Italica D. Marci Bibliotheca Codicum MSS. 1741.)

At least 5 MSS. of 4 Esdr. were consulted for the Vulgate edited by the theologians of Louvain, Antwerpiae, 1573 etc. The scanty list of various readings selected is reprinted in Walton's Polyglot, vol. vi.

On one occasion MS. authority is expressly quoted on the margin of our Auth. Vers. (see marginal note to iv. 51).

The position which 4 Esdr. occupies in the MSS. may be here briefly noticed. It is generally found in company with the other books of Esdr. after Chron. (the prayer of Manasseh frequently intervening). In C. 5 the books of Esdr. come after Malachi,

[1] The text is of the same type as that of the MSS. mentioned above, p. 34. This may be seen from the specimen which is given:

Domine, qui habitas in eternum, cuius oculi elati et superiora in aere, cuius thronus inestimabilis et claritas incomprehensibilis, cui astant exercitus angelorum cum tremore, quorum seruacio in uento et in igne conuertetur, cuius uerbum firmum et dicta perseuerantia, &c. 4 Esdr. viii. 20—22.

and in L. 4, O. 1, after Esther. In C. 8, the 1st, 2nd (= Neh.), and 3rd of Esdras are in their usual place after Chron. and Or. Man.; while 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. I. II.), 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.) and 5 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. XV. XVI.), form an Appendix at the end of the New Test. On the other hand, in C. 9 the Canonical books of Ezra and Neh. have been omitted in their proper places, and are supplied in a different hand at the end of the Volume.

The order of sequence in the several books of Esdr., which Cod. S. presents, is as follows: (1, 2 Paralip.), 1 Ezra (= Ezra, Neh.), 3 Ezra III. IV. V. 1—3 (this extract is written in smaller characters, and fills one page only), 2 Ezra (= 4 Esdr. I. II.), 3 Ezra (= 3 Esdr. I. II. 1—15), 4 Ezra (= 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.), 5 Ezra (= 4 Esdr. XV. XVI.), (Hester).

The peculiar way in which chapters from the 3rd book are here distributed seems to be hinted at by the Benedictine editors of Ambrose, in the vague description which they give of a St. Germ. MS. which I have proposed to identify with Cod. S. (see above, p. 4, note 1). The ambiguity thus created with regard to the place in which this book should stand, was probably the origin of its varying position in later copies. In many cases 3 Esdr. comes after 2 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. I. II.), and before 4 Esdr. (= 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.), as in Codd. C. 1, 4, 5, 7, 9, 10, 11, L. 1, 2, 5, 6, O. 1, 2, 5, also in the Cott., Hereford, Salisb., Edinb., All Souls, Orl., Reims, Douai and Vindob. (XVI.) MSS.

In other cases 3 Esdr. precedes 4 Esdr. I. II., (which is then followed immediately by 4 Esdr. III.—XIV.), as in C. 6, 12, D., L. 4, 7, O. 3, 6, 7, T., W., and in the Troyes, Arras, Cambrai, Leipzig and Vindob. (XVIII.) MSS. (3 Esdr. also comes before 4 Esdr. I. II. in C. 13, 14.) This is also the order of the books in Cod. A. (see above, p. 6)

It is interesting to notice that the MSS. (C. 6, 12, L. 7, O. 3, T., W., Arras and Cambrai), which were grouped together by internal evidence, have also this external distinction in common.

Page 42. H. A notice of this MS. may be found in an 'Account of the MS. Library at Holkham, by W. Roscoe' (Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, Vol. II. (1834), p. 356).

Verse 37. In Arab^2. Cod. Vat. has تخوفوا for تجرّعوا Cod. Bodl.

Verse 38. in contra, see Rönsch, pp. 235, 519. Comp. in palam XIV. 45.

Verse 38. In Arab^2. after الكبير ins. اليوم القضا هو الذى from Cod. Vat.

Verse 40, note 2. In a late Latin version of the 'Historia septem sapientum,' the style of which is thus characterized: "die ganze Schrift ist durch und durch romanisch, speciell italienish, gedacht und nur die äussere Hülle lateinisch," we meet with the expressions de sero and uno autem sero. (Mussafia, Beiträge zur Lit. der Sieben weisen Meister—Sitzungsberichte der Wiener Akad. 1868, pp. 96 and 114).

Verse 41, note 3. The Vat. MS. has لناقس for لنانس, thus giving another proof of its dependance on the Bodleian MS., for the additional point in ق has been left from the ن which is erased in the latter MS.—It is just possible that Ockley in rendering this word by 'blast,' may have had in view a supposed form ليلفس (λαῖλαψ), which closely follows the ductus literarum.

Verse 41. The order is different in the Cod. Vat. of Arab^2., which reads ولا مطر ولا برد ولا حر ولا ظل ولا زرع. (Both MSS. have ظل for طل).

Verse 42. In Arab^2. Cod. Vat. has ويروا الناس for ويرى الخلق Cod. Bodl.

Verse 47. Instances of confusion between μέλει and μέλλει are very common. See the various readings in Matth. XXII. 16, Mar. IV. 38, etc., Euseb. Eclogae Proph. III. 30 (p. 132, l. 13, ed. Gaisford), Chrysost. Hom. in Matth. 723 E., 833 D. (ed. Field). Comp. also Chrysost. Hom. in Epist. ad Rom. 583 C. (ed. Field), and Alb. Jahn's Methodius Platonizans (1865), p. 65.

Verse 66. Multum enim melius. Comp. also quantumque minor, Apul. de Magia Cap. LXIX. (note in Hildebrand's ed.), and quantum et maior, which is the reading of the Cod. Harl. in Theod. Mops. in Eph. I. 23. (Spic. Sol. I. 107, col. 2, l. 7).

Verse 69, note 1. This old plur. termination -is would naturally give rise to some confusion. I seem to see an instance of this in XIII. 4 qui audiebant uoces eius, where the original text was probably uocis eius, (the gen. after audio in imitation of the Greek, see Rönsch, p. 438)[1], which was mistaken for a plural. The oriental versions all have the subst. in the singular.

Verse 82. reuersionem bonam facere. The construction of this clause is peculiar to the Lat. The Syr. ('conuerti et bona facere') no doubt represents the orig. The error of the Latin translator might easily have arisen from mistaking ἐπιστρέφει ϗ ἀγαθοποιεῖν (or, ...ἀγαθὸν ποιεῖν) for ἐπιστροφὴν ἀγαθὴν ποιεῖν.

Verse 87. 'Septima uia est omnium quae supradictae sunt uiarum maior.' The construction is varied in verse 98, thus: 'Septimus ordo, qui est omnibus supradictis

[1] Similarly, exaudiuit me Deus, ancillae [-le S.] tuae IX. 45, Codd. A. (pr. m.), S., and et intellege sermonum meorum VIII. 19 Codd. A. (pr. m.), S. (Comp. σύνες τῆς κραυγῆς μου, Ps. v. 1.)

maior'[1]. In the other chapters also the comparative is followed either by the gen., as in Gk. (v. 13, vi. 31, xi. 4, 29, xii. 13, 45, xiv. 13), or by the abl. (viii. 30, so also ii. 43).

Verse 87, note 1. In the Arab. version Cod. V. has ينسلبوا instead of ينسبلوا. There are other examples of erroneous transposition of letters in this copy, as تركيس for تكريس vii. 108 (Ew. 83), and يطبلنى for يطلبنى xiv. 36.

Verse 89, note 1. In eo tempore commoratae seruierunt....As the clause at present stands, it is not unlikely that commoratae was taken by the scribe as equivalent to commorationis. I have not found elsewhere an instance of commorata used as an abstr. subst., like the analogous forms: defensa, extensa, missa, remissa, puncta, etc., see Rönsch, p. 83, and the remarks of J. N. Ott in Neue Jahrbücher f. Philologie u. Pädag. 1874, pp. 782, 783. In xiv. 13, Cod. S. has corrupte, where Cod. A. has corruptio^{ni} and the Text. Vulg. corruptelae.

Verse 89. uti (=ut). This older form occurs again, chap. xi. 46, also in Num. xxvii. 20, Cod. Ashburnh., and in the Vulg. of Philem. 14.

Verse 93. complicationem. Only two authorities have hitherto been cited for the use of this substant. viz. Cael. Aurelian. 4 Chron. 26, and Augustin. 1. Music. n. 19.

Verse 93, note 2. The original reading of Cod. A. in iii. 22, mansit in malignum is another illustration of this tendency to insert in after maneo. To the examples under (a) may be added: Si quidem et [Codd. Amb. Harl.] illos, si solummodo non obedierunt fidei, poena maneat, quanto magis illos qui.... Theod. Mopsuest. in 1 Thess. v. 8.

Verse 96, note 1. The Latin and Anglo-Saxon Psalter of the Univ. Library, Cambridge, Saec. xi. (Ff. i. 23), as well as the Rom. version in the Canterbury Psalter of Trin. Coll. Cambridge, Saec. xii. (R. 17. 1), have likewise haereditatem altered to haereditate in Ps. xxiv. 13. The latter has also hereditatem in Ps. lxxxii. 13. The Psalt. Veron. has haereditatem possidebunt terram in Ps. xxxvi. 22 (Blanchini, Vind. Canon.).

Verse 102, note 2. The form poterint occurs in both the MSS. of the Lat. transl. of Theod. Mopsuest. on the shorter Epistles of St. Paul; in the Amiens MS., potuerunt 1 Tim. v. 10, and poterunt 1 Tim. v. 24 (Comp. erint 1 Tim. v. 15), in the Harl. MS., Gal. i. 1, and potuerint 2 Thess. ii. 6.

[1] The two constructions stand in juxta-position in the Lat. of Cod. Bezae, Luke vii. 28, John xiii. 16, Matth. xii. 41, 42. (Comp. Cod. Bezae, ed. Scrivener, p. xxxix.)

INDEX I.

(In all cases the Pages of this work are referred to; n. indicates a foot-note).

Abbreviations in Codd. A. and S., 10—12, 79
Accents in Codd. A. and S., 12
Adverbs, peculiar forms of, 17
Æthiopic version of 4 Ezra, 2 n., 59 n., 60 n., 61 n., 65 n., 67 n.
——— ——— readings of MSS., 56 n., 57 n., 68 n.
Ambrose, 36, 73 n., 74, 75
Arabic version of 4 Ezra, 1 n., 77, 78
——— ——— corrected or explained, 30 n., 55 n., 56 n., 57 n., 58 n., 59 n., 61 n., 63 n., 64 n., 66 n., 67 n., 70 n., 72 n., 73 n., 77
Arabic, the 2nd Arab. version of 4 Ezra, 2 n., 78 ——— ——————————— corrected, 62 n., 65 n., 66 n., 67 n.
——— ——————————— readings of the Cod. Vat., 65 n., 86, 87
Armenian version of 4 Ezra, 2 n.
Arzareth, 23 n., 80
Attraction of the antecedent to the case of the relative, 69 n.
Augustine, 56 n., 69 n.

Bar Bahlul, 66 n., 70 n.
Baruch iv., v., copied by the writer of 4 Ezra i., ii., 24 n., 25 n.
———, the Apocalypse of, 62 n. (bis).
Brerewood, Edw., 80

Confessio Esdrae, 9 n., 34, 84, 85 n.
Constitutiones Apost. (II. 14), 72 n.
Corbie, the Abbey of, 7...
Cozza, Jos., S. Bibl. Vet. Fragm., 71 n.
Curetonian Syriac (Luke xiv. 18, 19), 72

Diodorus (on Gen. ii. 7), 64 n.

Erra Pater, 24, 80
Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. vii. 7. 2), 62 n.
Ezra, Book iii., the two Latin versions of, 82 n.

Faber, Nic., 4 n.
Future of the 2nd conjug., in -eam, 16
——— —— 3rd ——— -ebo, 16, 70 n.
——— —— 4th ——— -ibo, 16

Gender, mistakes in, 16, 17, 18
Genitive with the comparative, 87
Georgian version of the Bible, 78
Gildas, 'Epistola,' 36—38
Gildemeister, Prof. J., letter from, 5, 19
Grecisms, 17 n., 18, 26, 27, 87
Gyseburne priory, 87

Hebrew, report of a Hebr. copy of 4 Ezra, 3 n.
——— version of 4 Ezra xiii. (Cod. De-Rossi), 78
Heretici, interpolation of 'et heretici' (4 Ezra v. 8), 23, 81 Hermae Pastor (Vis. I. 3), 68 n.
——— ——— (Vis. II. 2, 3), 62 n.
——— ——— (Mand. III.), 68 n.
——— ——— (Sim. VIII. 3), 69 n.
Hieronymus, 41 n., 76
——————— on the Apocryphal books, 7 n.
Hippolytus, 64 n., 65 n., 72 n.

Infinitive abs. in Hebr., its Latin equivalent, 27 Interchange of consonants in Codd. A. and S., 14 ——————— —— vowels ——————— 12

Jacob of Edessa, 59 n., 73 n.

MSS. of the Lat. vers. of 4 Ezra, 6 n., 40, 85, 86
—— the Amiens MS., 6, 9
—— the Paris MS. (Sangerm.), 4, 9 n.

MSS., list of MSS. collated, 42
—— supplementary list, 82—85
Mirandula, Jo. Picus, 3 n.
Mozarabic Liturgy, 34

Nouns and pronouns, irregularities in, 14, 16

Omissions in Cod. A., 12
———— Cod. S., 22, 30

Papias (Eus. Hist. Eccles. III. 39), 69 n.
Philastrius (de haeres., § 95), 64 n.
Plato (de Legibus, x. p. 905), 65 n.
Plural ending in -is, 13, 87
Prepositions joined to the wrong case, 17

Raymundus Martini, 28 n.

Scaliger, J. C., 3 n.
Severus (hom. CIII.), 73 n.
Siphra, 28 n.
Syriac version of 4 Ezra, 2 n., 3 n.
———— corrected or explained, 55 n., 58 n., 61 n., 62 n., 72 n.

Theodorus Mopsuest. on the shorter Epistles of St Paul (Lat. vers.), 8 n., 79, 87, 88
Tironian symbol for autem, 11, 60 n.

Verbs, irregularities in, 16
——— depon. for act., 17
——— act. for depon., 17 ——— substantive verb omitted, 18 ——— compounds of -co, 17, 65
——— ———— iacio, 17

INDEX II.

LATIN.

ad expugnare, 18
adulare ei, 60 n.
aeramentum (=aes), 60
amodo and quomodo confounded, 70 n.
ante lucem (antelucium?), 57 n. aporient, 35
arguo with 2 acc., 33 n.
audii (imperat.), 53
audio with gen., 87

camillum for scamillum, 26 n. certati sunt, 67 n. certum (adv.), 17
commoratae, 67 n., 88 complicatio, 13, 88
confidebunt, 70 n.
constitutio, 58 n. consulo for consolor, 17
coram with acc., 66 n. coruscatio, 51, 57
curris for curribus, 16

de sequenti, 59 n. demolio, 17
destrictio (or distr-), 25 n., 81 detabescent, 65 n. diligentia, 28
diligentias, 56 n.
domino for dominor, 17
dominatiorem, 61 n.

erint, 72 n., 88 et in apod., 18 exteritio, 32 exteritus, 32
Ezraa (voc.), 13

feruerunt, 61
fidentes, 72 n.
fraudauerunt (legem), 63 n.
fruniscentes, 70 n.

gaelus (pr. m.), 57
gloriosi, 71 n.

haec (fem, pl.), 64 n.
haessitor, 17
hereditatem (or -tate) possidere terram, 69 n. hiems, 57 n.
horroribus, 66 n.

in with acc., 58 n., 66 n.
in contra, 86
ineonstabilitio, 33
inspirationes, 64 n. intellego with gen., 87 n.
interpretavi, 17
inuanae, 17
inuestigabilis, 26 n.
ipso (sibimetipso), 16
iteratum, 17

lacus and loeus conf., 55 n.

manet eis or eas, 67 n., 69 n., 88 mastix, 35 multiplicat (intrans.), 27 multum melius, 62 n., 87

neglexerint, 71 n.
nolii (imperat.), 52 nubs, 16

obaudire with acc., 18 obliuisci with acc. of pers., 18 obseruationes, 56 n.
opere for opera, 16

parco with acc., 18 n.
parti (=-tus), 16 n.
patior with gen., 26
pertransient, 65 n. plantasti and plasmasti conf., 23 plummum for plumbum, 52 poterint, 72 n., 88
potiono with 2 acc., 18

requietionis and requisitionis conf., 55 n. reuerentes and reuertentes conf., 71 n.

scamillum, 26 n.
scrutinor (dep.), 17
scruto, 17 n.
sequens (=secundus), 59 n.
sero or serum, 57 n.
sibilatus, 33
simulari with double const., 18 solo (dat.), 16 solummodum, 17
sommior (dep.), 17 n.
sonus for soni, 16
struo for instruo, 59 n. subremanet, 35

tego with 2 acc., 18 terminus sententiae, 63 n.
timoratior, 61 n.
trepidor (dep.), 17
tumulti, 16 n.
tumulto, 14

uti (=ut), 88
ualide (=ualde), 17
uaso, 66 n.
uidentes and uiuentes conf., 66 n.
nix ualde, 30

zelo, zelor, 17

Greek.

αἰσχύνη—ἐντροπή, 66 n., comp. 71 n.
διακομισθήσονται, 65 n.
ζυγοστατεῖν, 60 n.
κρίσις and κτίσις conf., 61 n.
μέλει and μέλλει conf., 58 n., 87 νοῇ and νοσῇ conf., 72 n. πλημμέλεια=indiligentia, negligentia, 56 n.
συμπεφυρμένοι=commixti, 62 n.

Syriac.

ܟܕܒ and ܟܕܒ conf., 55 n.
ܐܡ for ܐܠܗ, 58 n.
ܒܚ, 58 n.
ܒܠܥ, 63 n.
ܬܚܠܛ, 62 n.
ܚܠܠ, 62 n.
ܐܪܥ Aph., 72 n.

Arabic.

دالة, 70 n.
ذاب (iv.), 66 n.
سبل (vii.), 66 n.
طغيان, 67 n.
لنافس, 57 n., 87
نياح, 55 n.

INDEX III.

	Page.
4 Ezra i. 1	82 n.
2	31 n.
6	18, 30 n.
20	18
24	18
29	17
36	24
37	66 n.
38	24
ii. 5	24 n.
7	30 n.
15	24
20	30 n.
27	52
28	17
31	31 n.
32	17
40	20, 80
43	88
48	66 n.
iii. 1	17, 62 n., 84 n.
4	23, 25
5	20, 25, 74
7	28, 56 n.
8	19, 20, 31 n., 32, 80, 81
10	25
14	16, 30 n.
15	25
17	20, 80
18	30 n.
4 Ezra iii. 19	56 n.
21	31 n.
22	18, 20, 88
24	25
26	20
28	17, 31 n.
29	10 n.
31	20 (bis), 23, 30 n., 80
32	30 n.
34	31 n.
36	31 n. (bis)
iv. 4	20, 31 n.
5	30 n.
9	31 n.
10	30 n.
11	32
12	13
14	66 n.
15	12
16	17
17	14, 20
20	16
21	20
23	19, 25, 69 n.
24	19, 79
25	31 n.
28	25
29	32, 81
34	26
35	26
36	26, 31 n.
4 Ezra iv. 37	30 n.
39	32
48	31 n.
49	31 n.
52	4 n., 26
v. 1	14
5	31 n.
8	23 n., 81
9, 10	12
10, 11	12
13	17, 88
16	31 n.
19	17 n.
23, 24	17 n.
27	30 n.
29	26
33	26
35	30 n.
36	26
42	4 n., 31 n.
45	26, 27 n.
52	26
54	26 n.
55	17, 31 n.
56	31 n.
vi. 1	26
3	26
4	26, 81
7	31 n.
8	10 n.
12	19 (ter), 79, 80

Page.

4 Ezra vi. 13.....16
14.....27 n.
21.....30 n.
23.....26
24.....20
28.....31 n., 70 n.
29.....26
31.....88
31, 32 ...27 n.
34.....21 n.
36.....26, 66 n.
40.....31 n.
42.....9 n.
44.....13, 26
49.....30 n.
52.....30 n.
53, 54 ...25 n.
54.....69 n.
55.....26
56.....16, 66 n.
57.....17
59.....18, 70 n.

vii. 1.....18
2.....53
3.....30 n.
5.....17, 27 n.
9.....32
14.....72 n.
18.....31 n., 58 n.
20.....26, 65 n.
23.....62 n.
31.....18
32.....69 n.
33.....4 n.
35.....16
36—42...74
37.....86
38.....86
40.....87
41.....87
42.....87
47.....87
66.....87
67.....27 n.
69.....87
70.....77

Page.

4 Ezra vii. 75.....77
76.....77
78.....74
80—87...74
82.....87
87.....87, 88
89.....88
91—101..75
93.....88
96.....77, 88
100.....77
102.....58 n., 76, 88
104.....12
106 (36)...19, 22
108 (38)...19
111 (41)...26
112 (42)...20, 22, 30, 80
113 (43)...23, 26
115 (45)...22, 30 n.
116 (46)...12, 33
118 (48)...17 n., 77
122 (52)...13
123 (53)...12
125 (55)...17
127 (57)...18, 31 n.
132 (62)...31 n.
133 (63)...22
135 (65)...22

viii. 2.....60 n.
4.....22
5.....31 n., 33
6.....16
8.....15, 26
10.....31 n.
14.....23 n.
15.....27 n.
17.....58 n.
19.....87 n.
20—36...34, 85 n.
30.....12, 88
32.....30 n.
33.....16 n.
34.....12
35.....15
39.....12
41.....21

Page.

4 Ezra viii. 44.....23
45.....21, 26, 80
49.....26
50.....26
53.....10 n., 26, 29
54.....31 n.
56.....23
60.....26, 31 n.

ix. 2.....18
3.....30 n.
5.....23, 26
12.....18
15.....58 n., 65 n. (Corr.)
16.....26, 27
17.....22
18.....18
19.....27, 29, 31 n.
20.....30
21.....14, 30
24.....17 n.
26.....18
29.....27
31.....31 n.
32.....16
34.....13
45.....27, 87 n.
46.....17
47.....18

x. 7.....12
9.....26
10.....61 n.
14.....4 n.
16.....14, 63 n.
20.....21, 80
21, 22 ...12
22.....27
26.....31 n.
31.....16
32.....27 n.
36.....17 n.
41.....17
47.....31 n.
49.....17, 30 n.
59.....33
60.....30

Page.

4 Ezra xi. 1.....30
4.....88
10.....27
16.....27, 88
19.....20, 27
27.....12
29.....17 n., 18, 88
31.....18 (Corr.)
32.....17, 21, 80
35.....17 n.
37.....27, 28
40.....31 n.
43.....31 n.
44.....14
45.....27 n.

xii. 2.....14, 16 n., 33
5.....17
7.....17
8.....17
9.....31 n.
11.....30
12.....17
13.....61 n., 88 (bis).
23.....17, 31 n.
30.....17
31.....28, 33
32.....22, 33 n.
35.....33
45.....88
48.....17 n.
51.....31 n. (bis).

xiii. 1—9 .. 78, 79
4.....87
6.....16
8.....15, 17
10.....12, 28
11.....18
14.....30 n.
16.....62 n.
17.....33
18.....28
19.....33
20.....28
28.....18
32.....31 n.

Page.

4 Ezra xiii. 34.....18
36.....79
37.....33 n.
40.....33, 64 n.
45.....23 n., 80
46.....31 n.
48, 49 ...29
49.....69 n.
52.....29 n., 30 n.
53.....17
54—58...79
58.....31 n.

xiv. 2.....13
5.....30 n.
8.....33
9.....4 n.
11.....29
12.....28, 31 n.
13.....88
16.....27
18.....22
24.....11
29.....27 n.
31.....28
33.....14
36.....11
38.....12, 13, 18
40.....58 n.
45.....86
46, 47 ...3 n.

xv. 1.....28
11.....12 n.
13.....17
14.....17
20.....15
21—27...36—38
25.....22
29.....16, 17, 23 n., 33
30.....23 n.
33.....33
35.....13 n.
36.....13, 21
39.....13, 17 n., 32
40.....15, 17

Page.

4 Ezra xv. 42.....17
43.....15
45.....15, 21 n., 31 n.
46.....13
51.....34
53.....28
60.....12
63.....31 n.

xvi. 3—12...38—40
10.....22, 34
18.....65 n.
20—23...35
27.....15
29.....15
30—32...35, 36
33.....28
39.....16 n., 17, 28
40.....16 n.
43.....12
51.....18
52.....18
59.....14
60.....36
61.....17 n.
63.....17
63, 64 ...31 n.
65.....27 n.
68.....13
70.....72 n.
72.....18 n., 72 n.
76.....17
78.....5 n., 65 n.

Num. xiv. 12 .....62 n.
Deut. xxix. 27 .....23 n.
Ruth iv. 15 .....62 n.
2 Kings xxii. 7 .....68 n.
Job xx. 26 .....67 n.
— xxxiii. 16 .....66 n.
Ps. v. 1 .....87 n.
— xxiv. 13 .....69 n.
— xxxii. 20 .....67 n.
— xxxix. 3 .....55 n.

Page.

Ps. lxix. 22 18
— cxxxi. 11 .....63 n.
Prov. xxviii. 23 .....33 n.
Eccles. xii. 7 .....63 n.
Is. xxxi. 1 .....22 n.
— xl. 22.....36
— liv. 1 .....62 n.
Lam. ii. 1 .....26 n.
Ezek. xvii. 9 .....26 n.
—— xviii. 7 18

Page.

Ezek. xxxi. 16 .....55 n. (bis).
—— xlvii. 12 .....64 n.
Mal. i. 14 53

Tobit iii. 9 .....70 n.
Ecclus. i. 14 53
——— xii. 14 .....62 n.
——— xxi. 15 .....60 n.
——— xxiv. 14.....58 n.

Page.

Ecclus. xxx. 4 .....59 n.
Bar. iv. 36, 37.....25 n.

Luke xiv. 18, 19.....72 n.
—— xxiii. 11 18
Acts vii. 49.....26 n.
Hebr. xii. 9, 25 .....62 n.
1 Pet. iii. 9.....69 n.
Rev. xviii. 17 .....55 n.

CORRIGENDA.

Page 3, col. 2, line 24 from below. For In patris (ed. Bas.), the Bologna ed. (1496) has correctly In primis.
Page 13, line 16. For IV. 23 read IV. 23*.
—— note 2. Dele cogitationis XVI. 55.
Page 14, line 17. For XVI. 48 read XVI. 48*.
Page 15, line 19. For quessiui read quaessiui.
Page 18, line 19. For cum eo read cum ea.
Page 36, lines 2 & 4. Cod. S. has relinquęntur.
—— line 2. For et singulis read in singulis.
—— lines 2 & 3. For quatuor read quattuor.
Page 40, line 14. Transfer & from line 15 to the end of line 14.
—— line 15. Dele ? at the end of the line.
Page 41, line 25. For Ignace read Ignazio.
Page 42, col. 2, line 11 from below. For A. I. 12 read A. I. 14.
Page 67, line 4. For Imprimis read Inprimis.
Page 82, note 3. For Edinb. read York, Edinb.

CAMBRIDGE: PRINTED BY C. J. CLAY, M.A. AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

Princeton Theological Seminary Libraries
1 1012 01250 0908

Date Due

FACULTY